

Pepperdine University Literary Style Guide

INTRODUCTION

Editorial Stance

Pepperdine University has adopted a unified literary style for both print and electronic media, which principally follows the Chicago Manual of Style (16th edition) with certain exceptions noted in this guide. Pepperdine style is a “down” style, meaning that capitals are to be used sparingly and intentionally. References to the 16th edition (when applicable) are provided within entries where Pepperdine and Chicago coincide.

Ideal Pepperdine style is minimalist yet pragmatic, intended to provide clarity, consistent logic, and elegant structure to its communications, using the least amount of punctuation and type to most effectively and quickly deliver an author’s message to the intended audience.

Editorial/Aesthetic License

Pepperdine style should give writers and designers a broad range of creative freedom in which to work. Deviations from standard practice in University-branded, flagship publications are permitted only by agreement with Integrated Marketing Communications management. All factual claims must be verifiable. Grammar and usage must follow standard current practices.

Standard Reference Books

Consult the 16th edition of the Chicago Manual of Style for questions of style, punctuation, and grammar not treated in this guide. Consult the 11th edition of the Merriam-Webster Collegiate Dictionary to check correct and preferred spelling, syllable division, hyphenation, and abbreviated forms. The American Heritage Dictionary, any edition, is recommended for reference on how words are popularly understood in the United States.

Pepperdine-Chicago vs. Associated Press (AP)

With the exception of scholarly writing, most Pepperdine authors and editors who are accustomed to writing in the AP style will need to become accustomed to three major differences:

1. use of the serial comma,
2. the italicization of major works, and
3. less tolerance for abbreviations.

Figures and numerals are treated more or less in the AP style.

1 CAPITALIZATION

DO CAPITALIZE:

1.1 Proper nouns.

Capitalize proper nouns, months, days of the week, but not the seasons (unless designating a specific semester or trimester).

George Pepperdine, Nils Bohr, Angelina Jolie, etc.
Acme Corporation, Wal-Mart, Microsoft, McMann & Tate, etc.
Griffith Park, the Getty Museum, Ford Motor Foundation, etc.
the Hope Diamond, the Emmys, etc.
the 27th Annual Roadkill Bar-B-Q and Souped-up 4x4 Rally
January, February, March, etc.
Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, etc.

Jason went to Heidelberg during the fall of 2003.

BUT

Brittany attended the Lyon campus for the Fall 2003 semester.

Note: Fall, Spring, Summer, or Winter may be capitalized when used as a short reference to a specific academic term.

Example in the context of a catalog or other program description:

Applications for the Fall are due May 1, 2008. [presuming an earlier reference to the Fall 2008 trimester]

1.2 Titles of works.

Rules for title capitalization.

Use regular (a.k.a. headline style) capitalization; the first and last words and all nouns, pronouns, adjectives, verbs, adverbs, and subordinating conjunctions (if, because, as, that, etc.) are capitalized. Articles (a, an, the), coordinating conjunctions (and, but, or, for, nor), and prepositions are lowercased unless they are the first or last word of the title or subtitle. The to in infinitives is also lowercased.

Note on prepositions: Discretion may be used uppercasing prepositions that are five or more letters long, and/or have contextual emphasis or substance.

Long titles of works published in earlier centuries may retain the original capitalization, except that any word in full capitals should carry only an initial capital.

No word in a quoted title should ever be set in full capitals, regardless of how it appears on the title page of the book itself, unless it is an acronym, such as WAC, UNICEF, or FORTRAN. (Chicago, 8.157)

Italics versus quotation marks.

Pepperdine style follows Chicago on the indication of works within running text. The general principle is that long or major works are italicized, while shorter or minor works are put in quotes.

Examples:

ITALICIZE:

Print media:

NOVELS: The Sound and the Fury, Great Expectations, Lolita

PUBLISHED MEMOIRS/DIARIES: The Diary of Anne Frank

NONFICTION BOOKS: The Careful Writer: A Modern Guide to English Usage

PAMPHLETS, TRACTS, ETC.: Have You Heard of the Four Spiritual Laws?, Lifestyles in Retirement

BOOK-LENGTH POEMS: The Iliad, The Divine Comedy, Nibelungenlied

MAJOR SPEECHES: Gettysburg Address, Washington's Farewell Address, George Pepperdine's Dedicatory Address

PUBLISHED DISSERTATIONS AND THESES: Cloning and Characterization of Genes Required for Osmoregulation in the Yeast Saccharomyces Cerevisiae

PERIODICALS, JOURNALS, MAGAZINES: U.S. News & World Report, New England Journal of Medicine, Dishwasher, Harvard Business Review, Hot Rod, The X-Men

NEWSPAPERS: the Chicago Tribune, the Los Angeles Times, the Acorn

Note: For newspapers, lowercase initial the: do not treat as part of proper name; hence use lowercase and roman in running text. Refer to Section 1.22.

Electronic media:

WEB-BASED MAGAZINES AND JOURNALS: the Graziadio Business Review, Salon.com, Slashdot, Forbes.com

BLOGS (OR WEB LOGS): Graziadio Voice, Golden Governance, TaxProf Blog

Legal matters:

LEGAL CASES AND JUDICIAL DECISIONS: Plessy v. Ferguson, Miranda v. Arizona, the Miranda case, In Re Gault, the Dred Scott decision

Dramatic, broadcast, and musical works:

FILMS: Star Wars—Episode 3, Revenge of the Sith; The Man Who Came to Dinner; Night and Fog; It's a Wonderful Life; 8½; Rashomon

PLAYS: Death of a Salesman, The Oresteia, Hedda Gabler

TV AND RADIO SERIES: Friends, Frontline, Zoey 101, Battle of the Network Stars, I Love a Mystery, All Things Considered

ORCHESTRAL COMPOSITIONS – LENGTHY: Pictures at an Exhibition, Swan Lake, Haydn's Surprise Symphony, L'Arlesienne Suite no. 2, Die Moldau

OPERAS AND ORATORIOS: Death of Klinghoffer, La Boheme, Messiah

MUSICAL COMEDIES AND OPERETTAS: My Fair Lady, 42nd Street, The Fantasticks, Pirates of Penzance

MUSICAL TRAGEDIES: Evita, West Side Story, Miss Saigon

ALBUMS AND RECORDINGS: the White Album, Trumpet Evolution, Miles Davis's album, 'Round About Midnight, ... the DVD production, Into the Woods, features Bernadette Peters...

Related to works of art:

PAINTINGS, PRINTS, AND ILLUSTRATIONS: Mona Lisa, Death of Marat, ... Femme couchee, a lithograph signed and numbered in pencil by Pablo Picasso ..., Daybreak by Maxfield Parrish

PHOTOGRAPHS: Ansel Adams's North Dome, William Sherman by Matthew Brady

COMIC STRIPS: Dilbert, Doonesbury, Krazy Kat, Peanuts

SCULPTURE: Rodin's The Kiss, David by Michelangelo

BUT the Venus de Milo, the Elgin Marbles (see Ancient Art below)

ART PERFORMANCES AND INSTALLATIONS: Vito Acconci's Seedbed, Nerve Bible by Laurie Anderson, Christo's Wrapped Reichstad, Richard Serra's TWU

ART EXHIBITIONS AND EXHIBITION CATALOGS: Altered Reality: Contemporary Paintings and Digital Images from the Frederick R. Weisman Art Foundation / Andy Warhol: Life & Legends

ENCLOSE IN QUOTES:

Short or minor literary works:

MAGAZINE AND JOURNAL ARTICLES: "Apple's Core Problem"; "The Texan and the Belle"

UNPUBLISHED WORKS: ... in his master's thesis, "Modal Analysis of the Improvisations of John Coltrane," ...

POEMS: "The Village Blacksmith"; "Howl"; "The Waste Land"

BUT

"anbody lived in a pretty how town" (short poem by E. E. Cummings)

SPEECHES, LECTURES, AND SERMONS: "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God"; "Microsoft and the Chicago School of Economics: Is Antitrust Obsolete?"; "The I Am and the I Am Not"

SHORT STORIES: "The Tell-tale Heart"; "The Gift of the Magi"

Short and/or minor works of performing or photographic arts:

TV SCREENPLAYS AND EPISODES: "Death on the Hill"; "The Monsters Are Due on Maple Street"

SONGS: "O for a Thousand Tongues"; "Love to Love You, Baby"; "Oh What a Beautiful Mornin'"

OPERA ARIAS AND CHORUSES: the "Jewel Song"; "Je dis que rien ne m'épouvante"; "Che gelida manina"; the "Humming Chorus"; "Canta, mendigo errante"; "Kommt ein schlanker Bursch gegangen"

Note: Aria titles in foreign languages are not italicized. French, Italian, and Spanish cap only the initial word (sentence style). German caps all nouns.

WORKS NEITHER ITALICIZED NOR IN QUOTES:

Works that seem to need special treatment, but do not:

ANCIENT ART: the Venus de Milo, Winged Victory, Discobolos

GENERICALLY NAMED INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC: B-flat Nocturne, Piano Sonata no. 2, Mass in B Minor, Symphony no. 6, Fantasy in C Minor, K. 475, Sonata in E-flat, op. 31, no. 3

BUT Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony, the Resurrection Symphony by Gustav Mahler

SOFTWARE: Microsoft Word, Lotus 1-2-3, Windows 10, Photoshop, Quark

ELECTRONIC GAMES: Super Mario Brothers / Grand Theft Auto / World of Warcraft

1.3 Personal titles and offices.

Capitalize all traditional educational, occupational, business, and governmental titles when used specifically in front of the name; do not capitalize these titles when they follow the name or are used generically. (Chicago, 8.21-8.23)

William Banowsky, president of Pepperdine University/
President William Banowsky

Ronald Reagan, president of the United States/
President Ronald Reagan

Vernon Wormer, dean of Faber College/
Dean Vernon Wormer

General George Patton/General Patton

Professors Henry Jones, Sr., and Marcus Brody

Doctors Schweitzer and Livingstone

Executive Director Allyson Tompkins wrote a tract entitled Joy.

Therapist Jean Qualls retired in 2005.

The dean of the business school must approve all business research projects.

All exceptions must be cleared with the athletic director.

Contact the dean of students for further information.

Dr. Ruth Leavitt, director of micropathology, will speak at the symposium. Professor Roy Hinkley, Jr., chairperson of the Life Sciences Department, will present his paper on tropical island ferns in September.

Tim Cook is and chief executive officer of Apple while Arthur Levinson serves as chairperson.

Notes:

The term chairperson rather than chairman is now preferred usage within the University (chair is also acceptable).

Contrast treatment of unofficial or attributive titles in Section 1.20. For comprehensive example also see Appendix 2, Table of Initial and Successive Reference: Pepperdine University Personnel.

1.4 Forces and troops.

Full titles of armies, navies, air forces, fleets, regiments, battalions, companies, corps, and so forth are capitalized. The words army, navy, and so forth are lowercased when standing alone or used collectively in the plural, or when they are not part of an official title. (Chicago, 8.111)

Fifth Army; the Fifth

United States Air Force; the air force

United States Army; the army; the American army; the armed forces

United States Coast Guard; the Coast Guard

United States Marine Corps; the Marine Corps; the US Marines; the marines

United States Navy; the navy

1.5 Pepperdine University and its schools (Pepperdine exception).

The word University whenever referring to Pepperdine University, even though the word Pepperdine may not precede it.

Note: The same principle does not apply regarding the word school when referring to specific schools.

Pepperdine University is located on an oceanside bluff in Malibu. The University [direct second reference] typically enrolls around 7,500 students total in its five schools. Pepperdine is an independent, private Christian university [direct but generic reference] affiliated with Churches of Christ.

Seaver College is named for Frank Roger Seaver, the spouse of benefactor Blanche E. Seaver. The college first opened for classes in 1972.

The Graduate School of Education and Psychology comprises the two eponymous divisions, Education and Psychology. Doctorates are offered in both divisions of the Graduate School approved direct second reference, see [Appendix 1]. The school [generic second reference] offers several convenient evening- and weekend-study locations for mid-career adults.

Refer to the Table of Initial and Successive References in Appendix 1 for comprehensive printed treatment of the University and its five schools.

1.6 Institutions, commercial and governmental entities, organizations, and the like (and their departments and subdivisions).

Capitalize the words association, building, center, club, conference, school, department, division, hall, office, street, etc., when used as part of a title; do not capitalize the words association, building, school, etc., when used alone to refer to that specific place or group. Short forms may be capitalized, especially to avoid ambiguity. (Chicago, 8.67)

Coogies Beach Cafe/cafe
Malibu Presbyterian Church/church the Bradbury Building/building
Walt Disney Concert Hall/Disney/concert hall, hall
L.A. and Ventura Counties (or counties—see Section 1.14)/county, counties the Bighorn Golf Club/Bighorn/club
Department of Health/department
Office of Management and Budget/office
Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher/company, firm, etc.
the (The) Boeing Corporation/Boeing/company, firm, etc.

Note: Lowercase initial word the: do not treat as part of proper name; hence use lowercase and roman in running text. Refer to Section 1.20.

Departments, divisions, and the like:

Capitalize specific and/or formal reference to departments and other company subgroups, but lowercase generic reference:

the Human Resources Department/Human Resources/the department the Corporate Communications Division/Corporate Communications/the division the Collections Unit / Collections/the unit
the Office of Asset and Risk Management/the office

Lowercase “department” and “office” when preceded by an administrative function that makes generic reference to a presumed subentity within an organization.

The primary goal of the Payroll Office is to strive for completely accurate and timely processing of all payroll activities.

BUT

Al thought he'd give the payroll office a visit after finding a mistake in his withholding.

“So I asked for the complaint department and was told I needed to ‘conference’ with the senior executive director of the Center for Reconciliation and Total Client Satisfaction.”

1.7 Names of bodies and entities within Pepperdine University.

Treat regularly as indicated in 1.6 above.

Board of Regents/the board, the regents
Pepperdine University Alumni Association/the association the University Senate/the senate the Communication Division, the Business Division/the division the Davenport Institute/the institute the Center for Human Resources, the Center for the Arts/the center the Office of Financial Assistance/the office the Department of Public Safety/the department
the Graphic
the Caruso Family Chair in Constitutional Law

Usage note: In general, do not do not capitalize "the" when it precedes the name of any entity of Pepperdine University. Rationale: capping “the” causes over-analysis and disruption of flow in reading; and in practice, it is difficult to maintain consistency of styling and uniformity of appearance. Exception: Aliento, The Center for Latina/o Communities at GSEP

1.8 Course names.

A specific course or subject should be capitalized. (Chicago, 8.85)

HIST 525 – Problems in 20th-Century German History
LAW 1902 – Cross-Cultural Negotiation and Dispute Resolution

However, do NOT capitalize fields of study, curricula, major areas, or major subjects, except names of languages, unless referring to a specific course. Authors and editors may make exceptions for rhetorical or marketing emphasis. (Chicago, 8.84)

He is studying philosophy and English.

Brianna is a junior, majoring in business administration with an emphasis in finance.

Each student must meet core requirements in science and the humanities.

Seaver College offers a curriculum in sports medicine.

Kumar earned the certificate in dispute resolution from the School of Law.

The School of Law will offer Constitutional Law in the fall semester.

The Graduate School of Education and Psychology offers doctorates in organizational leadership and clinical psychology.

The Graziadio School of Business and Management offers a master of business administration degree.

1.9 Geographic names.

Geographic terms commonly accepted as proper names are capitalized. Other descriptive or identifying geographic terms that either are not taken to apply to one geographic entity only or have not become commonly regarded as proper names for these entities are not capitalized. Cultural or climatic terms derived from geographic proper names are generally lowercased. The following examples illustrate these principles and their (not always logical) variations. (Chicago, 8.43-46)

the Swiss Alps; the French Alps; an Alpine village (if in the Alps), BUT alpine pastures in the Rockies;

Antarctica; the Antarctic Circle; the Antarctic Continent;

the Arctic; the Arctic Circle; a mass of Arctic air (BUT lowercased when used metaphorically, as in “We are having arctic weather in Chicago”);

Central America, Central American; central Asia; central Illinois; central France; central Europe (BUT Central Europe when referring to the political division of World War I); Central California (when referring to the San Joaquin Valley area as a cultural entity);

the continental United States; the continent of Europe; the European continent, but on the Continent (meaning in continental Europe as opposed to Great Britain), continental Europe, Continental customs BUT continental breakfast;

the East, eastern, and easterner, the eastern seaboard, East Coast (referring to the eastern United States); the East, the Far East, Eastern (referring to the Orient and Asian culture); the Middle East (or, formerly more common, the Near East), Middle Eastern (referring to Iraq, Iran, etc.); the Eastern Hemisphere; eastern Europe (BUT Eastern Europe when referring to the post-World War II division of Europe); eastward, to turn east (direction);

the equator, equatorial climate; equatorial Africa; Equatorial Current; Equatorial Guinea; meridian, prime meridian; thirty-eighth parallel; international date line;

the Great Plains; the northern plains; the plains (BUT Plains Indians);

the Midwest, Midwestern, a Midwesterner;

the North, northern; Northern, Northerner (in American Civil War context); the Northwest, the Pacific Northwest, the Northwest Passage, northwestern; North Africa, North African countries, in northern Africa; North America, North American, the North American continent; the North Atlantic, a northern Atlantic route; the Northern Hemisphere; Northeast Brazil (a political division); the Far North; Northern California (when referring to the region as a cultural entity);

the poles; the North Pole, North Polar ice cap; the South Pole; polar regions, polar climate;

the South, southern (current reference to the former states of the Confederacy); Southern, a Southerner (in American Civil War contexts); the Deep South; the south of France; the Southeast, the Southwest, southeastern, southwestern (US); Southeast Asia; South Africa, South African (referring to the Union of South Africa); southern Africa (referring to the southern part of the continent); Southern California (when referring to the region as a cultural entity);

Tropic of Cancer, Tropic of Capricorn; Neotropics, Neotropic(al); the Tropics; tropical, subtropical; the Torrid Zone;

Upper Michigan, the Upper Peninsula, northern Michigan; Upper Egypt; Upper Rhine; the upper reaches of the Thames;

the United States, the US, the States, the “lower 48,” the US mainland (when using US as a noun, try to use United States as a first reference when possible);

the West, Occident, occidental culture (BUT an Occidental), Western world, western Europe (exception – political contexts), westerner; Western Hemisphere; the West, West Coast (of the US), the Northwest, the Pacific Northwest, the Far West, the Middle West, the Midwest (US); west, western, westerner, westward (direction);

Los Angeles Place Names (some Pepperdine exceptions). South Central Los Angeles, in South Central, South Los Angeles; West Los Angeles, West L.A., the Westside; East Los Angeles, East L.A. (when referring to these regions as regional and/or cultural entities); Greater Los Angeles, the Greater L.A. Basin; the San Fernando Valley, the Valley; the San Gabriel Valley; the various named districts of the City of Los Angeles (Larchmont, Venice, Hollywood, Mt. Washington, Brentwood, Mar Vista, Boyle Heights, Leimert Park, Thai Town, Reseda, Studio City, Tarzana, Encino, North Hollywood, Panorama City, Angeleno Heights, Eagle Rock, the Miracle Mile, Downtown, Little Tokyo, Chinatown, etc.).

1.10 Names of athletic clubs and teams.

Capitalize names of athletic clubs and teams. Do not capitalize initial “the” preceding names.

the Pepperdine Waves, the Waves

the Los Angeles Dodgers, the Dodgers

the Los Angeles Lakers, the Lakers

the Los Angeles Kings, LA Kings, the Kings

1.11 Names of all races, ethnicities, and nationalities.

Capitalize names of all races, ethnicities, and nationalities. (Chicago, 8.37-39)

Caucasian, Asian, Asian American, African American, Mexican American, Native American, American Indian, Hispanic, Latino, Latina, Jew, Jewish, etc. (Do not hyphenate American when it occurs subsequent and in conjunction with an ethnic or racial term.)

Canadian, Mexican, Central American, European, Irish, Croatian, British, Brit, African, Nigerian, Asian, Turk, Kurd, Israeli, Australian, New Zealander, Pole, Trobriand Islander.

Usage notes:

African American means Americans who are descendants of African slaves in some specific policy contexts—in contrast to Americans who have immigrated from the African continent (and their American descendants).

Exception: Generally, black and white as racial terms should be lowercased, but may be uppercased in contexts in which sensitivity and custom dictate (e.g., EEO policy text).

Employ the same logic for descriptors of imaginary places and other planets and worlds:

Elysian, Atlantean, Stygian, Olympian, Martian, Venusian, Malacandran, Rigelian, Klingon, etc.

1.12 Numbered rooms and pages (Pepperdine exception).

Capitalize the word room when used to designate a particular room. Capitalize the word page when used with a numeral at the top or bottom of a page for page number (but lowercased when used in the body of text).

The committee met in Room 303 of the Thornton Administrative Center.

You will find the quotation on page 50, line 12, of your textbook.

1.13 Named professorships and chairs.

Capitalize all named chairs and professorships, and distinguished professorships.

Seaver College

the Carl Miller Chair of Journalism

the Flora Laney Thornton Professorship of Nutrition

the Howard A. White Professorship of History

Graduate School of Education and Psychology

the Muriel Lipsey Chair of Counseling and Clinical Psychology

the M. Norvel and Helen Young Professorship of Family Life

Graziadio School of Business and Management

the Corwin D. Denney Academic Chair of Business and Management

the William E. Leonhard Professorship of Business

the Julian Virtue Chair of Economics and Entrepreneurial Education

School of Law

the D and L Straus Distinguished Visiting Professor Chair of Law

the Ronald Phillips Chair of Law

the Caruso Family Chair of Constitutional Law

School of Public Policy

The Ronald Reagan Professor of Public Policy

1.14 Shared components of plural proper nouns.

When a generic term is used in the plural either before or after more than one proper name, the term should be capitalized if, in the singular form and in the same position, it would be recognized as a part of each name. See next section for treatment of governmental entities. (Chicago, 8.52, 8.55)

The Communication and Business Divisions have hired new instructors.

The divisions have hired new instructors.

1.15 Governmental entities.

When a place-name references a governmental entity rather than a location, words like city, county, state, etc., are usually capitalized. (Chicago, 8.51)

She works for the City of Malibu.

Los Angeles and Ventura Counties have high crime rates.

The Counties of Los Angeles and Ventura have formed a joint task force to deal with high crime rates. (County of Los Angeles and County of Ventura are proper names of governmental bodies.)

Several counties in Southern California have high crime rates.

1.16 Themes, Slogans, and Special Titles for Campaigns, Conferences, Conventions, Symposia, and Other Special Events

Capitalize thematic titles of fundraising and other campaigns, conferences, conventions, symposia, galas, panel discussions, and the like. Such thematic titles may be italicized, bolded, put into quotes, or otherwise visually emphasized as design intentions permit to achieve clarity.

the Campaign for Pepperdine the Challenged to Lead campaign the Wave of Excellence campaign
The US Vice Presidency: In History, Practice, and the Future
Changing the Game
The Power of Story
Lifted Up: Great Themes from John 18-21

Note: Treatment of themes/titles with more than one subtitle

Such event names frequently have subtitles; treat by setting off by a colon as in examples 4 and 7 above. Sometimes there will be a second subtitle; in those cases set off the additional subtitle(s) with a semicolon. (following the citation logic of Chicago, 14.98-99)

Serendipity 2017!: Celebrating the Now; A Festival of Sharing

DO NOT CAPITALIZE:

1.17 Terms such as cum laude, magna cum laude, summa cum laude, and baccalaureate.

Lowercase all of the above terms as follows:

She graduated summa cum laude from Seaver College.
The baccalaureate ceremony will be held in Firestone Fieldhouse.

1.18 Organized groups or classes of students in a university or high school. The words freshman, sophomore, junior, senior, or graduate.

ENGL 101 should be taken in the freshman year.
John Smith is a junior business major.
The senior class will conduct its annual election tomorrow.

Usage note: The term “first-year” should be preferred over the sexist term “freshman” whenever possible.

1.19 Academic degrees.

Lowercase academic degrees when referred to in such general terms as doctorate, doctor’s, bachelor’s, or master’s, etc., are not capitalized.

Notes: The term doctorate should not be used in combination with degree, since doctorate means doctoral degree. The terms masters’ degree and bachelors’ degree are never correct. Avoid doctor’s as an adjective; use doctoral instead.

Having completed her bachelor’s and master’s degrees at Pepperdine, eventually earning her doctorate at Vanderbilt, Edna thought that attaining her master’s had been the easiest.

1.20 Unofficial or attributive titles preceding a name.

Lowercase unofficial titles or personal attributes used as titles.

comedian Steve Martin founder George Pepperdine
Seaver professor David Green (because it is not his formal title)

Contrast treatment of personal titles and offices in Section 1.3.

1.21 Officers of a class, social organization, etc.

Designations of officers of a class, social organization, etc., should be lowercased.

Helen Young is founding president of Associated Women for Pepperdine.
Beverly was elected first-year class secretary.

1.22 The article “the” in proper names.

Occurrences of an initial the in names of newspapers periodicals, organizations and their entities, and the like should be lowercased (but uppercased as the rules of grammar otherwise demand).

the Graphic
the Los Angeles Times
the *Wall Street Journal
the Nation magazine*
the Boeing Company*
the Walt Disney Company*
the Department of Motor Vehicles
the Salvation Army*
the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints*
the American Red Cross the Customer Service Desk
the NCAA
the West Coast Conference

*These entities all style themselves with a preceding The.

The “Go-the-Extra-Mile” Rule: Authors and editors may choose to honor an entity’s self-styled The, but when doing so, they must fact-check all similarly styled organizations mentioned in the document and treat equally.

1.23 The University of California campuses.

When referring to a University of California campus for the first time in text, the campus location is appended with a comma. University of California administrators prefer that “at” never be used in such references.

the University of California, Los Angeles not the University of California at Los Angeles

In subsequent references, the following abbreviations may be used. Note that a comma or hyphen is not used.

UC Berkeley
NEVER UCB* or UC, Berkeley

UC Riverside NEVER UCR*

UC Davis or UCD

UC Santa Barbara NEVER UCSB*

UCI or UC Irvine

UC Santa Cruz

UCLA

UCSD or UC San Diego

UC Merced NEVER UCM*

UC San Francisco

*Exception: schedules or tabular material

1.24 California State University campuses.

When referring to a member school of the California State University system, the following style is preferred:

California Maritime Academy
California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo
California State Polytechnic University, Pomona
California State University, Bakersfield
California State University, Channel Islands
California State University, Chico
California State University, Dominguez Hills
California State University, Fresno
California State University, Fullerton
California State University, Hayward
California State University, Long Beach
California State University, Los Angeles
California State University, Monterey Bay
California State University, Northridge

California State University, Sacramento
California State University, San Bernardino
California State University, San Marcos
California State University, Stanislaus
Humboldt State University
San Diego State University
San Francisco State University
San Jose State University
Sonoma State University

2 ABBREVIATIONS

GENERAL PRINCIPLE:

When in doubt, spell the word out. Abbreviations may be more freely used in tabular material.

DO ABBREVIATE:

2.1 Complimentary titles.

Titles such as Mr., Ms., Mrs., and Dr. should be abbreviated, but do not use them in combination with any other title or with abbreviations indicating scholastic or academic degrees.

Paul Huston, PhD, NOT Dr. Paul Huston, PhD

Carol Green, MD, NOT Dr. Carol Green, MD

Mr. Victor E. Wynn has been appointed head coach for men's lacrosse.

Ms. P. Rose Crittenden assumes duties as associate librarian in May.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stamper have been season-ticket holders for years.

Dr. Ezekiel Payne has retired from his practice of oral surgery.

Dr. and Mrs. Croesus Scratch were seated at the president's table.

Dr. Emily and Mr. Croesus Scratch were seated at the president's table.

Drs. Wren Byrd and Robyn Wing made a joint presentation to the society.

University chaplain Rev. Aloysius Wright and his wife, Ms. Patricia Leithold-Wright regularly opened their home to campus-ministry events.

Hon. and Mrs. Saenz Dukommen hosted the reception honoring the newly appointed dean.

BUT The Honorable Justice Saenz Dukommen presided with the proverbial velveted iron fist.

Note: Refer to a dictionary for other proper forms of address and salutations for clergy, diplomats, foreign heads of state, government officials, military ranks, etc.

2.2 Page or pages.

Abbreviate using p. or pp. in footnotes or bibliographical material; spell out when used in text.

See pp. 143-150.

You will find an example on page 258.

2.3 Time and time zones.

When spelled out, designations of time and time zones are lowercased, except for proper nouns. Abbreviations are capitalized. (Chicago, 8.89)

Greenwich mean time (GMT) daylight saving time (DST) Pacific standard time (PST)
central daylight time (CST) eastern standard time (EST)

2.4 Company name components.

In notes, bibliographies, lists, and so on, the abbreviations listed below may be freely (if consistently) used. (Chicago, 10.22, 10.72)

Assoc., Bro., Bros., Co., Corp., Inc., LLC, LLP, LP, Ltd., Mfg., PLC, RR, Ry., etc.

2.5 Academic degrees.

Academic degrees may be abbreviated. In general, do not punctuate academic degrees. If punctuated (to effect a more formal or conservative style) keep treatment consistent throughout a document. Note: MBA and joint degrees (e.g., JD/MBA) are always unpunctuated.

bachelor of arts – BA (B.A.) bachelor of science – BS (B.S.)

2.6 Course names.

Abbreviate the department name of a course when it is followed by the course number. Be sure to use the official subject abbreviation used in the specific catalog or academic brochure pertaining to the course.

Besides an elective course in English, REL 110 should be selected by the student.

2.7 The word versus.

The word versus may be abbreviated as vs. In legal material v. is used.

DO NOT ABBREVIATE:

2.8 Place-names.

Fort, Mount, and the like - Prefixes of geographic names should not be abbreviated in text. Exception can be made when space is limited. (Chicago, 10.31)

Fort Wayne	Mount Baldy	South Bend
Port Arthur	Greater Antilles	Lower California (Baja)
Eastern Ghats	North Korea	New Caledonia
West Virginia	Prince Edward Island

Saint - Saint may be freely abbreviated or spelled out in text. As always, maintain a consistent logic.

Saint (St.) Croix	Saint (St.) Louis	Saint (St.) Paul
Saint (St.) Lawrence	Mount St. (Saint) Helens

Alumna Laura St. Cloud, a native of Fort Wayne, Indiana, has been appointed regional sales director for St. Vincent, St. Kitts, Port Watson, and Nevis. She recently received the Saint Mother Theresa Award for Urban Compassion, which is annually awarded by All Saints Anglican Church of San Leandro, California.

2.9 Names of months.

Names of months should be spelled out in running text. Exception: Offices using Associated Press style for press releases (and related formats) and may abbreviate names of months (Jan., Feb., Mar., Apr., May, Jun., Jul., Aug., Sep., Oct., Nov., and Dec.).

December 25, 1999 (for text)

Dec. 25, 1999 (for tables, etc.)

2.10 Address components.

With a few exceptions, abbreviations should not be used in addresses in running text. (Chicago, 15.34-35) In letter writing, the two-letter state abbreviations are recommended as most efficient for both the recipient’s address block, the return address, and indications of mailing address within the correspondence itself. The following terms should be spelled out:

Avenue, Boulevard, Building, Court, Drive, Lane, Parkway, Place, Road, Square, Street, Terrace; North, South, East, West (but do not capitalize directions when used in text).

Brock House is located on Presidents Drive.

Before boarding a plane to Mexico, the informant first cut south to drop off a package to a person waiting in a vehicle parked outside of 553 South Alvarado Street near MacArthur Park.

Approved proofs were sent to T/O printing located at 31345 Agoura Road, Thousand Oaks, California, on July 27.

2.11 US states, territories, possessions and the like.

Names of states, territories, and possessions of the United States should always be given in full when standing alone. When they follow the name of a city or some other geographic term, it is preferable to spell them out EXCEPT in lists, tabular matter, notes, bibliographies, indexes, and mailing addresses. (See treatment of states’ names in letter writing in Section 2.10 above.) In such instances, except in the case of mailing addresses, the first of the two forms of abbreviation listed is preferred; the two-letter form is specified by the United States government for use with zip code addresses in mailing and is often useful in other contexts:

Kans.	KS	Ohio	OH
Ky.	KY	Okla.	OK

2.12 Country names.

Names of countries are spelled out in text. In tabular and other tightly set matter they may be abbreviated as necessary. (Chicago, 10.32-33) Abbreviate United States to US when used as an adjective or as a successive reference in some cases.

People's Republic of China or China/PRC
United Kingdom/UK
US Department of Defense

2.13 Institutional names.

Words such as association, department, institute, etc., should not be abbreviated.

2.14 Acronyms and abbreviations as first reference.

Abbreviations or acronyms are never used as a first reference either in titles or when the names are mentioned in text, although they may be employed in subsequent references. Exceptions: Nationally well-known abbreviations such as FBI, CIA, etc., are acceptable.

Avoid beginning a sentence with an acronym whenever possible, unless it is preceded by The.

The GSEP alumni held their annual meeting at the Century Plaza Hotel.

2.15 Christmas.

Do not abbreviate the word Christmas to Xmas.

2.16 Percent.

Do not abbreviate percent to pct. (see Section 4.5)

In general, use the word percent, but in scientific, technical, and statistical copy use the symbol %.

2.17 Given names.

Given names such as George, William, and Charles should not be abbreviated.

Exception: Wm. Matthew Byrne, Jr., Judicial Clerkship Institute

2.18 Assistant and associate.

Do not abbreviate assistant and associate when used in a title:

assistant professor of sociology associate professor of history

2.19 Ampersand (&).

Do not use the ampersand in place of and in ordinary text.

Exceptions: Designers may employ the ampersand in titles and headlines to aesthetic effect. Professional partnerships (lawyers, accountants, et al.) are generally styled with an ampersand, which can be used in all those cases.

3 PUNCTUATION

COMMAS, SERIES, AND LISTS

3.1 Serial commas.

Use a comma before the words and and or in a series. (Chicago, 6.18)

The annual Gala Week show will be presented by the Varsity Glee Club, The Showcase Singers, and the Pepperdine University Symphony Orchestra.

Do you want peas, carrots, or broccoli with your meal?

3.2 Serial semicolons.

When elements in a series are long and complex or involve internal punctuation, they should be separated by semicolons. (Chicago, 6.19, 6.58)

The three speakers were Dr. Mark Kleiman, UCLA; Dr. Harvey Mansfield, Harvard University; and Dr. Ted McAllister, Pepperdine University.

3.3 Appositives.

A word, phrase, or clause that is in descriptive apposition (i.e., additional, nonessential information) to a noun is set off by commas. It is often helpful to think of the words between the commas as a parenthetical aside: (Chicago, 6.43)

My wife, Elizabeth, had written to our congressperson.
(This example can work with or without commas depending on author's intent. Commas would be used if knowing her name was not necessary.)

James Joyce's most famous novel, Ulysses, has been translated into many languages.
(In this case it is a given that Ulysses is Joyce's most famous novel, so the title is nonessential.)

But, if the appositive has a restrictive function (i.e., is essential information), it is not set off by commas.

My son Michael was the first one to answer. My son John answered later.
(In the example above, the writer is differentiating between two sons, so the names are essential and take no commas.)

James Joyce's novel Ulysses has been translated into many languages.
(In this instance the title of the novel is essential information, so it takes no commas.)

3.4 Jr. and Sr. and the like.

Commas are no longer required around Jr. and Sr. If commas are used, however, they must appear both before and after the element. Commas never set off II, III, and such when used as part of a name. (Chicago, 6.47)

Charles William DeLor Jr. ran for Congress.

Charles William DeLor III ran for Congress.

The speech by Malcolm S. Forbes, Jr., was very informative.

3.5 Short introductory adverbial phrases.

Short introductory adverbial phrases, such as currently, certainly, now, and happily, are not set off by commas. (Exceptions: therefore, thus, and indeed) Those that show contrast, such as however and nevertheless, are set off by commas.

Currently she is working as a temporary assistant.

Certainly we will be voting for the best candidate.

Grandmother is ill; therefore, we shall not be attending the party.

He failed the first exam; however, he passed the final with flying colors.

He failed the first exam. However, he passed the final with flying colors.

She did well in all her classes. Thus, she was allowed to go on vacation during spring break.

3.6 Figures.

Place a comma after digits signifying thousands (1,500 students), except when reference is made to temperature (4600 degrees), military time (0800 hours), and to years (1933).

3.7 Dates.

When writing a specific date in text, place a comma between the day and the year and after the year: (Chicago, 6.45)

July 4, 1993, was a memorable day in Los Angeles.

Do not place a comma between the month and year when the day is not mentioned.

July 1983 is the hottest month on record for our town.

3.8 Cities with states – in series of names.

When listing names in series with cities or states, punctuate as follows:

George Andrews, Frankfort, Kentucky, president; Carol Green, Lafayette, Indiana, vice president; etc.

3.9 Cities with states – text.

In text, when using city and state, place a comma before and after the state. (Chicago, 6.46)

Dallas, Texas, is the home of the Cowboys football team.

3.10 That is, namely, and the like.

A comma is usually used after such expressions as that is, namely, i.e., and e.g. The punctuation preceding such expressions should be determined by the magnitude of the break in continuity. If the break is minor, a comma should be used. If the break is greater than that signaled by a comma, a semicolon or an em dash may be used, or the expression and the element it introduces may be enclosed in parentheses: (Chicago, 6.43)

He had put the question to several of his friends, namely, Jones, Burdick, and Fauntleroy.

The committee—that is, several of its more influential members—seemed disposed to reject the Brower Plan.

Keesler maneuvered the speaker into changing the course of the discussion; that is, he introduced a secondary issue about which the speaker had particularly strong feelings.

Bones from a variety of small animals (e.g., a squirrel, a cat, a pigeon, a muskrat) were found in the doctor's cabinet.

Due to a dead car battery, Winslow was forced to find alternate means of getting to work, i.e., he hailed a cab.

Note: i.e. and e.g. are not interchangeable. The former means in other words (used when clarifying a previous statement), and the latter means for example (used when listing specific examples). See Section 7.24.

3.11 Vertical lists.

Omit periods after items in a vertical list unless one or more of the items are complete sentences. If the vertical list completes a sentence begun in an introductory element, the final period is also omitted unless the items in the list are separated by commas or semicolons: (Chicago, 6.124, 6.125)

The following metals were excluded from the regulation:

molybdenum
mercury manganese magnesium

After careful investigation the committee was convinced that

1. the organization's lawyer, Watson, had consulted no one before making the decision;
2. the chair, Fitchu-Braun, had never spoken to Watson;
3. Fitchu-Braun was as surprised as anyone by what happened.

Note that when the items are separated by commas or, as above, semicolons, each item begins with a lowercase letter (unless a proper noun).

For long enumerations it is preferable to begin each item on a line by itself, in what is known as outline style. The numerals are aligned on the periods that follow them (using decimal tabs), and are either set flush with the text or indented. In either case runover lines are best aligned with the first word following the numeral (hanging indents). (Chicago, 6.126)

The inadequacy of the methods proposed for the solution of both histological and mounting problems is emphasized by the number and variety of the published procedures, which fall into the following groups:

1. Slightly modified classical histological techniques with fluid fixation, wax embedding, and aqueous mounting of the section or the emulsion
2. Sandwich technique with separate processing of tissue and photographic film after exposure
3. Protective coating of tissue to prevent leaching during application of stripping film or liquid emulsion
4. Freeze substitution of tissue with or without embedding followed by film application
5. Vacuum freeze-drying of tissue blocks followed by embedding
6. Mounting of frozen sections on emulsion, using heat or adhesive liquids

Note that in the example above, each item begins with a capital letter and ends without punctuation. If, as is also the case above, the enumerated items are syntactically part of the sentence, the items may also begin lowercase and carry appropriate end punctuation (see above, second example in this section).

Bullets and dots. The use of bullets or heavy dots in place of enumeration is sometimes resorted to, but these may be considered cumbersome, especially in a scholarly work. Sometimes em dashes are used in place of bullets. However, when using bullets in a listing, the first word following the bullet should begin with a capital letter, and the entry should end with a period. Avoid using one-word bullet entries, if possible.

To be considered for admission to Seaver College, an applicant's file must include the following:

- A completed application for admission.
- A $45 application processing fee.
- A transcript from an accredited high school or equivalent.
- Scores from either the SAT or ACT test.
- An evaluation of the applicant's potential to do well at Seaver College from a teacher of the school most recently attended and from a personal acquaintance who is not related.

COLONS AND SEMICOLONS

3.12 The colon in general.

The colon is used to mark a break in grammatical construction equivalent to that marked by a semicolon, but the colon emphasizes the content relation between the separated elements. The colon is used, for example, to indicate a sequence in thought between two clauses that form a single sentence, or to separate one clause from a second clause that contains an illustration or amplification of the first: (Chicago, 6.59)

The officials had been in conference most of the night: this may account for their surly treatment of the reporters the next morning.

Many of the policemen held additional jobs: thirteen of them, for example, doubled as cabdrivers.

In contemporary usage, however, such clauses are frequently separated by a semicolon or are treated as separate sentences. There is no preference for using a colon vs. a semicolon in these cases, but consistent treatment is recommended throughout a document.

The officials had been in conference most of the night; this may account for their surly treatment of the reporters the next morning.

Many of the policemen held additional jobs; 13 of them, for example, doubled as cabdrivers.

Many of the policemen held additional jobs. Thirteen of them, for example, doubled as cabdrivers.

Introducing statements, quotations, or lists

A colon is used to introduce a formal statement, an extract, or a speech in dialogue: (Chicago, 6.63-64)

The rule may be stated thus: Always . . .

We quote from the address: “It now seems appropriate . . .

Michael: The incident has already been reported.

Timothy: Then, sir, all is lost!

A colon is commonly used to introduce a list or a series:

Shakespeare’s plays include three major works: Hamlet, Macbeth, and Romeo and Juliet.

Binghamton’s study included the three most critical areas: McBurney Point, Rockland, and Effingham.

A colon is not normally used after namely, for example, and similar expressions. Nor is it used before a series introduced by a verb or preposition. (Exception: series consisting of one or more grammatically complete clauses)

Binghamton’s study included the three most critical areas, namely, McBurney Point, Rockland, and Effingham.

John’s article focused on three major problems in the public schools, namely, overcrowding, underfunded programs, and disinterested parents.

For example: Morton had raised French poodles for many years; Gilbert disliked French poodles intensely; Gilbert and Morton seldom looked each other in the eye.

A colon is also used to introduce a subtitle of a work. Note: the first word of a subtitle is always capitalized. (Chicago 8.162, 14.97, 14.98)

Forever Young: The Life and Times of M. Norvel Young and Helen M. Young

3.13 Colons in conjunction with follows or the following.

The terms as follows or the following require a colon if followed directly by the illustrating or enumerated items, or if the introductory clause is incomplete without such items: (Chicago, 6.62)

My point can be illustrated by the following:

(Quoted material would be indented from both margins, single spaced, with no quotation marks.)

The procedures for registration are as follows:

1. Pick up your forms from the registrar . . .

If the introductory statement is complete, however, and is followed by other complete sentences, a period may be used.

An itemized list of the charges follows. Note that care was taken to ensure that all costs are shown.

1. Four tires were installed at a cost of . . .

3.14 Placement of colon within quotation marks or parentheses.

The colon and semicolon should be placed outside quotation marks or parentheses. (Chicago, 6.96)

The senator gave three reasons for changing the national anthem to “America”: it’s the favorite patriotic song of most Americans; the words are more appropriate; the music is easier to sing.

Christopher was concerned by one of the changes noted in the attitude of the fraternity members (Delta Iotas): all of the Deltas had become very surly.

The senator was in favor of changing the national anthem to “America”; thus, the matter was brought to a vote.

APOSTROPHES (THEIR USE AND MISUSE)

3.15 Forming plurals.

Figures and letters.

In making the plural of figures or single letters, do not use apostrophes unless confusion may occur:

the 1880s and 1890s NOT the 1880s and '90s

the three Rs

the '70s (when referring to decades)

Letters, noun coinages, numbers, and abbreviations.

So far as it can be done without confusion, single and multiple letters, hyphenated coinages, and numbers used as nouns (whether spelled out or in numerals) form the plural by adding s alone: (Chicago 7.15; see also Chicago 6.82)

all SOSs	the early 1920s
the three Rs	several YMCAs and AYHs
thank-you-ma'ams	CODs and IOUs in twos and threes

Use of apostrophe. To avoid confusion, lowercase letters and abbreviations with two or more interior periods or with both capital and lowercase letters form the plural with an apostrophe and an s. (Chicago 7.16)

x's and y's
M.A.'s and Ph.D.'s (or MA's and PhD's)

Note the following exceptions:

p. (page), pp. (pages)
n. (note), nn. (notes)
MS (manuscript), MSS (manuscripts)

3.16 Class year abbreviations.

Punctuate years of college classes with an apostrophe:

Class of '76 John White, '68

3.17 Don't confuse apostrophe with single quote.

Do not confuse an apostrophe (') with a single open-quote (‘). Word will usually insert the correct symbol for you, but not always. This is an especially common pitfall in alumni listings when typing or editing the styling Class of '01—Word will insert an open-single-quote when typed immediately following a space and then make a smart-key conversion to an apostrophe when the word is concluded with a space. This smart-key function is frequently foiled by mistypes and edits.

3.18 Adjectival plural nouns.

If a plural noun is used as an adjective and not strictly as a possessive, it does not take an apostrophe.

Pepperdine Associates dinner

Presidents Drive

Benefactors Circle

Masters Forum

Church Leaders Council

Christian Scholars Conference

Gulls Way

Regents Scholarship

Princes Gate (see entry in “A Pepperdine Glossary”)

BUT

all regents’ cars must be parked in the main parking lot

Chancellor’s Circle (because there is only one chancellor)

Founder’s Day (because there is only one founder)

Pepperdine Associates.

When referring to the annual gathering of the Pepperdine Associates, an apostrophe is not used after the qualifier and dinner is lowercase.

The Pepperdine Associates dinner was a success.

Pepperdine Waves.

When referring to the Pepperdine Waves, an apostrophe is not used when Waves is used as part of a name or as an adjective.

The Waves baseball team won the national championship in 1992.

The Waves golfers advanced to the NCAA tournament for the first time last year.

When Waves is used as a possessive, however, an apostrophe is used.

The Waves' success is due to good players and coaching.

3.19 In conjunction with ending punctuation.

If a word ending with an apostrophe ends a sentence, the period or other mark of closure goes outside the apostrophe.

. . . Bob Fosse's Tony-winning musical Dancin'.

LETTERS (SIGNIFYING WORDS OR INTRINSIC MEANING)

3.20 Letter grades.

Scholastic letter grades should be capitalized and take s when pluralized. (Chicago, 7.60)

As, Bs, and Cs

3.21 Broadcast call letters and acronymic names.

Call letters of radio stations and alphabetical abbreviations (acronyms) of groups or organizations such as AACSB, AALS, ABA, APA, MLA, YMCA, AWP, NASA, WASC, ROTC, USDA, GSEP, UCLA, etc., should be capitalized and written without periods or spaces. (Chicago, 10.24-25)

3.22 Academic degrees.

Letter symbols of academic degrees should be capitalized and are written without periods. Periods may be used for formal and traditional treatments. The following list includes frequently used abbreviations for academic degrees and professional and honorary designations: (Chicago, 10.20)

AB	Artium Baccalaureus (Bachelor of Arts)
AM	Artium Magister (Master of Arts)
BA	Bachelor of Arts
BD	Bachelor of Divinity
BFA	Bachelor of Fine Arts
BM	Bachelor of Music
BS	Bachelor of Science
DB	Divinitatis Baccalaureus (Bachelor of Divinity)

DD	Divinitatis Doctor (Doctor of Divinity)
DDS	Doctor of Dental Surgery
DHL	Doctor of Humane Letters (also LDH, see below)
DMD	Doctor of Dental Medicine
DMin	Doctor of Ministry
DO	Doctor of Osteopathy
DVM	Doctor of Veterinary Medicine
EdD	Doctor of Education
FAIA	Fellow of the American Institute of Architects
FRS	Fellow of the Royal Society
JD	Juris Doctor (Doctor of Law)
JP	Justice of the Peace
LHD	Litterarum Humaniorum Doctor (Doctor of Humanities)
LittD	Litterarum Doctor (Doctor of Letters)
LLB	Legum Baccalaureus (Bachelor of Laws)
LLD	Legum Doctor (Doctor of Laws)
LLM	Legum Magister (Master of Laws)
MA	Master of Arts
MD	Medicinae Doctor (Doctor of Medicine)
MFA	Master of Fine Arts
MP	Member of Parliament
MS	Master of Science
MSN	Master of Science in Nursing
PhB	Philosophiae Baccalaureus (Bachelor of Philosophy)
PhD	Philosophiae Doctor (Doctor of Philosophy)
PhG	Graduate in Pharmacy
SB	Scientiae Baccalaureus (Bachelor of Science)
SM	Scientiae Magister (Master of Science)
STB	Sacrae Theologiae Baccalaureus (Bachelor of Sacred Theology)

MBA – the master of business administration degree is to be normally styled without periods. Authors and editors may add the periods in the rare context where their absence may be misconstrued as a typo.

Joint degrees - Periods are never used in cases of joint degrees (e.g., JD/MBA).

Adjectival forms of degrees: bachelor’s, master’s, doctoral.

Bachelor’s, master’s, and doctor’s degrees should always be written with an ’s. Never write masters’ degrees. Use the term doctoral degree rather than doctorate degree. (see Appendix 4 for additional guidance) (Chicago, 7.14, see also Chicago, 8.28)

HYPHENS

3.23 Word division.

Word division at the end of a line should be done at syllable breaks. Two-letter divisions are permissible, but two-letter word endings should not be carried over to the next line if this can be avoided.

en-chant di-pole as-phalt

NOT: loss-es mon-ey rest-ed ful-ly

3.24 Division of proper nouns and personal names.

Proper nouns of more than one element, especially personal names, should be broken, if possible, between the elements rather than within any of the elements. If a break within a name is needed, consult the dictionary. Those that cannot be found in a dictionary should be broken or left unbroken, according to the guidelines found in Chicago 7.32-43. If pronunciation is not known or easily guessed, the break should usually follow a vowel.

Alek-sis
Jean- / Paul Sartre (or better, Jean-Paul / Sartre)
Ana-stasia

When initials are used in place of given names, again try not to break at all, but if necessary break after the second (or last, if there are more than two). A break before a number, Jr., or Sr. should be avoided. (unless Jr. or Sr. is enclosed in commas).

if necessary A. E. / Housman

BUT NEVER A. / E. Housman

Frederick L. / Anderson

M. F. K. / Fischer

Elizabeth II (or, if necessary, Eliz- / abeth II)

Always try to keep titles with names. Note: To keep two words together, a “hard space” may be inserted in Microsoft Word by holding down Shift and Ctrl simultaneously and pressing the space bar.

The “Challenged to Lead” campaign provided major funding for building projects and academic needs.

3.25 Compound (hyphenated) words.

General stance on compounding words.

Unless a compound is specifically spelled with a hyphen and it is the only spelling offered in the current edition of the Merriam-Webster Collegiate Dictionary, do not hyphenate unless additional clarity can be obtained by doing so.

Vice prefix..

Do not hyphenate vice president, vice chancellor, vice admiral, vice chair, etc.

Prefixes non-, multi-, anti-, pre-, semi-, sub-, re-, un-, and the like..

Check for a hyphenated form in the Pepperdine standard dictionary (current edition of Merriam-Webster’s Collegiate). Give preference to unhyphenated forms if they are listed therein. If only a hyphenated form is listed, give that preference. If there is no form listed, do not place a hyphen between the prefix and the combining word, except those compounds containing a proper noun. Exception is made when using a hyphen will result in greater clarity to readers (see note on readability below).

nonprofit	semiliquid
unattributed	anti-Semitic
nonadmission	multiethnic
pro-American	multifaceted non-Christian	cross-country
anti-Western	multicellular
pre dentistry	preeminent
reexamine	substandard

Hyphens and readability. A hyphen can make for easier reading by showing structure and, often, pronunciation. Words that might otherwise be misread, such as re-creation or co-chair, should be hyphenated. Hyphens can also eliminate ambiguity. Although decision making as a noun is not normally hyphenated, to add one in fast decision-making shows that decisions (not snap judgments) must be made soon. Similarly, the hyphen in much-needed clothing shows that clothing is badly needed rather than abundant and needed. Where no ambiguity could result, as in public welfare administration or graduate student housing, hyphenation is not mandatory, though it is quite acceptable and preferred by many writers and editors. (Chicago, 7.80)

Forming hyphenated compounds not found in the dictionary.

A comprehensive set of guidelines can be found in Chicago 7.85. Some of the most common formations are as follows:

adjective + noun: blue-state senators, high-quality education, middle-class constituency, the neighborhood is middle class. (Hyphenated before but not after a noun.)

adjective + participle: red-tagged building, big-boned woman, open-ended question, ocean-going vessel, high-flying CEO, the zucchini was deep fried, the sophomore was slow witted. (Hyphenated before but not after a noun.)

adverb not ending in -ly + participle or adjective: much-beloved president, well-read woman, she was regarded as being quite well read, fast-talking Texan, most reviled characters, least popular genre. (Hyphenated before but not after a noun; compounds with most and least usually open.)

age terms: a three-year-old, a 35-year-old drifter, for 75- to 85-year olds. (Hyphenated in noun and adjective forms.)

common fractions: one-half, one-third, one-quarter, one-eighth, one-sixteenth, two-thirds, three-quarters, seven-eighths, nine-sixteenths, etc., BUT seventeen thirty-seconds. (Spell rather than using numerals. Hyphenate in all forms except when second element is itself hyphenated.)

compounds formed with fractions: a half hour, half-hour session, a two-thirds majority, a virtual one-third-minority veto, an eighth-note run, nine-sixteenths-inch plywood, one-sixteenth Seminole. (Noun form open, adjective form hyphenated.)

gerund + noun: running shoes, running-shoe department, writing implement, witching hour, firing-squad leader, climbing vine, rolling-stock inventory, ragin'-Cajun blues. (Noun form open, adjective form hyphenated.)

noun + adjective: a debt-free year, the judgment was intended to be value neutral, a flight-ready jet, a crash-prone hard drive, a target-rich environment, risk-averse strategy, management's style is risk tolerant. (Hyphenated before a noun, usually open after a noun.)

noun + gerund: decision making, decision-making authority, Nobel Prize-winning scientist, leave taking, bookkeeping, caregiving, “. . . he can take his tax-hiking, government-expanding, latte-drinking, sushi-eating, Volvo-driving, New York Times-reading, body-piercing, Hollywood-loving, left-wing freak show back to Vermont . . .” (Noun form usually open; adjective form hyphenated before a noun. Some permanent compounds closed.)

noun + noun, single function: student nurse, apprentice plumber, tenure track, tenure-track position, home wrecker, box-lunch social, flag waver, action item, Bible-thumpers church, attitude-adjustment hour. (Noun form open, adjective form hyphenated before noun.)

noun + noun, two functions: nurse-practitioner, city-state, student-athlete, student-intern, yin-yang balance, student-intern performance, cost-benefit analysis, good-cop–bad-cop routine. (Noun form and adjective form always hyphenated.)

noun + participle: fun-filled event, action-packed weekend, bond-laden portfolio, Jason Alexander is height challenged, bear-baiting strategy, the lecture was thought provoking, the pipes were corroded and crud encrusted. (Hyphenated before noun, otherwise open.)

number + abbreviation/noun: 10 ft. pole, 32 mi. commute, 500 pg. book, one in. depth. (Always open with abbreviation.)

number + noun (contrast above): 10-foot pole, 32-mile commute, 500-page book, one-inch depth. (Hyphenated before noun, otherwise open.)

number + percentage: 50 percent, 5 percent raise. (Always open.)

number, ordinal + noun: third-floor apartment, 103rd-floor view, first-place winner. (Adjective form is hyphenated before noun.)

number, ordinal + superlative: a second-best decision, America's fourth-largest city, the third-to-last contestant to finish the race, he finished third to last. (Hyphenated before a noun, otherwise open.)

participle + noun: puffed-rice dessert, cutting-edge technology, the product line represented the cutting edge, stuffed-animal collectors convention, distressed-leather jacket, fallen-angel status. (Adjective form hyphenated before a noun; seldom used after a noun.)

Capitalization: Cap only the initial letter of a hyphenated word string in running text (per the regular rules of capitalization in Section 1). In headlines and titles, capping the subsequent word elements is permissible as context and aesthetics dictate.

Text: The guests of honor for the gala were Vice President-elect and Mrs. Cheney.

Headline: Pepperdine Clinches First-ever NCAA Basketball Championship

BUT Pepperdine Clinches First-Ever NCAA Basketball Championship ALSO OK

Part-time and full-time.

Hyphenate part-time and full-time when used as adjectives in front of a noun but without a hyphen when following the noun. Hyphenate any modifying word combined with well when it precedes a noun, but do not hyphenate when it follows the noun.

Suzanne is a full-time student.

Matthew works part time.

well-built engine; well-run office
The well-known senator from California was in the lead.
The senator from California was well known.
ill-fitting; better-prepared; best-loved; lesser-regarded; least-desirable

3.26 Series of compounds.

When a series of two or more compounds has a common word, omit it in all except the last term and retain all hyphens:

long- and short-term rates three-, four-, and five-foot lengths first-, second-, and third-year students

3.27 Foreign phrases.

Omit the hyphen in a foreign phrase modifier:

bona fide sale ex officio member per diem allowance prima facie evidence laissez faire attitude Sturm und Drang struggle

QUOTATION MARKS AND QUOTATIONS

3.28 Quotes within quotes.

Use single quotation marks for quotations printed within other quotations.

“I find the high notes in the ‘Star-Spangled Banner’ hard to sing,” Sheila remarked.

“We were shocked to hear him say ‘Put up your hands!’” Gina reported.

3.29 Single quotes in headlines.

Use single quotation marks in headlines.

3.30 Quoting multiple paragraphs.

If two or more paragraphs are to be quoted, use quotation marks at the beginning of each paragraph, but at the end of the last paragraph only.

Note: Quotation marks are not used with indented, single-spaced quotations.

3.31 Quotation marks in conjunction with other punctuation.

Set quotation marks outside periods and commas and inside colons and semicolons. They should be set inside of exclamation points and interrogation marks that are not part of the quotation; otherwise, they should be placed outside.

The reviewer had three criticisms of “The Open Boat”: the writing was pedestrian; the plot was boring; the details weren’t realistic.

“I’m afraid!” the child cried.

3.32 Question-and-answer formats.

No quotation marks are necessary in printing interviews when the name of the speaker is given first or in reports of testimony when the words question and answer or Q and A are used, such as:

Q: Who will benefit from the plan?

A: Full-time staff, students . . .

Jones: How do you plan your curriculum?

Smith: A committee does that.

3.33 Quotations used as sentence element.

When a quotation is used as a syntactical part of a sentence, it begins with a lowercase letter, even though the original is a complete sentence.

He reminds us that “experience keeps a dear school.”

But when the quotation is not syntactically dependent on the rest of the sentence, a comma is used and the initial letter of the quotation is capitalized.

As Franklin advised, “Plough deep while sluggards sleep.”

ELLIPSIS DOTS.

3.34 Ellipses.

Ellipses are used to indicate omissions from quoted material. Three dots, with a space before the first, after the last, and between each one, indicate an omission within a sentence.

The Senate shall [choose] their other officers . . . in the absence of the vice president, or when he shall exercise the office of president of the United States.

When the last part of a quoted sentence is omitted and what remains is still grammatically complete, four dots—a period followed by three ellipsis dots—are used to indicate the omission. If the sentence ends with a question mark or an exclamation point, that punctuation, of course, replaces the period or other terminal punctuation and the preceding word, even though that word does not end the original sentence (Chicago, 13.48-51):

The spirit of our American radicalism is destructive and aimless. . . . The conservative party . . . is timid, and merely defensive of property.

Whether her criticism is valid or not, shall I capitulate to her? . . . And shall I be subject to her ridicule the rest of my life! . . . I would rather cut off my ears.

When what remains is not grammatically complete, the period is omitted:

Everybody knows that the Declaration begins with the sentence “When in the course of human events . . .” But how many people can recite more than the first few lines?

If the beginning of the opening sentence of a quotation is deleted, ellipsis dots are usually not necessary and are ordinarily omitted:

the conservative party . . . is timid, and merely defensive of property. . . .

DASHES AND BRACKETS

3.35 The em dash.

When two hyphens are used to indicate a long dash, known as an em dash, no space follows or precedes them. The principal use of the em dash is to offset an amplifying or explanatory element. NOTE: Word will automatically replace two dashes with an em dash if no spaces are placed before or after the two dashes. An em dash may be inserted manually in Microsoft Word by holding down the Ctrl, Alt, Num Lock, and hyphen keys simultaneously. See Section 7.23 for further information on hyphens and dashes. (Also Chicago, 6.82-89)

The panel—composed of faculty from all seven divisions—stayed to answer questions after the discussion.

3.36 The en dash.

An en dash is half the length of an em dash and is twice the length of a hyphen.

em dash: — en dash: – hyphen: -

The principal use of the en dash is to connect continuing, or inclusive, number—dates, time, or reference numbers. (Chicago, 6.78-81)

1968–72 10 AM–5 PM

May–June 1967 pp. 38–45

John 4:3–6:2 the 1999–2000 academic year

3.37 The hyphen.

Use hyphens to connect noninclusive numbers, such as telephone numbers and social security numbers. (Chicago, 6.76-77)

999-99-9999 818-702-1447 078-05-1120 95-1644037

3.38 The bracket.

Brackets are used to enclose editorial interpolations, corrections, explanations, or comments in quoted material.

“I worked for Bill Banowsky [Pepperdine’s president from 1971 to 1978] while I was a student.”

“His attitude [toward the defendant] is very detrimental to our case.”

Brackets are used as parentheses within parentheses:

His latest book (adopted by Book-of-the-Month Club [see article on p. 10]) deals with the settlement of Australia.

SLASH (SOLIDUS, VIRGULE, SLANT, FORWARD SLASH)

3.39 The slash.

The slash has several uses. (Chicago 6.105-110)

Use the slash to signal alternatives:

he/she his/her and/or Margaret/Meg/Maggie

When one or more of the terms is an open compound, a space before and after the slash can be helpful:

First World War / World War I

Sometimes the slash means “and”:

the JD/MBA program a Jekyll/Hyde personality

Use the slash to show a two-year span:

After a period of dry winters, we experienced record rainfall in the winter of 2016/7. Program enrollment spikes in academic years 2005/6 and 2009/10 were unusual.

Use the slash for informal indications of the date:

3/15/17 [meaning March 15, 2017 in the US]

Use the slash in abbreviations:

1,125 feet/second [per] c/o [in care of] w/o [without]

Use the slash as a fraction bar:

5/7 [five sevenths or five divided by seven]

Use the slash for line breaks in quoted poetry. When two or more lines are indented, in running text, slashes with space on each side are used to show the line breaks:

Under a spreading chestnut tree / The village smithy stands; / The smith, a mighty man is he, / With large and sinewy hands;

Use the slash to indicate URLs and other paths:

www.pepperdine.edu/admission/international-students/new-students

NOTE: Do not confuse the slash (/) with the back slash (\).

4 FIGURES AND NUMBERS

Definition: For the purpose of this section, number is understood to mean the concept by which we define quantity, measurement, or sequence, and numeral is understood to be the typographical symbols (0-9, comma [,], point [.] , etc.) by which we represent specific numbers apart from spelling them out in words. For instance, the first positive whole number is represented by the word “one”, and by the Arabic numeral “1”.

4.1 Numerals or words.

THE FOLLOWING ARE SPELLED OUT IN ORDINARY TEXT:

Numbers which occur at the beginning of a sentence. Note: When spelled out, the numbers twenty-one through ninety-nine are hyphenated, whether used alone or as part of a larger number (e.g., one hundred eighty-six).

Whole numbers from one through nine.

Any of the whole numbers above followed by hundred, thousand, hundred thousand, million, and so on.

USE NUMERALS FOR EVERYTHING ELSE:

Generally, numerals are used for all other numbers (exceptions noted in various sections below):

Thirty leading Republicans from 11 states urged the governor to declare his candidacy.

The property is held on a 99-year lease.

The first edition ran to 2,670 pages in three volumes, with 160 copperplate engravings.

The entire length of 4,066 feet is divided into nine spans of paired parabolic ribs.

The three new parking lots will provide space for 540 more cars.

4.2 Punctuation of Numbers.

In numerals of 1,000 or more, commas are placed between groups of three digits, counting from the right. If writing for an international readership use half spaces instead. (Chicago, 9.55-56)

1,234,567 (standard style)

1 234 567 (international style)

Page numbers, addresses, and up-to-four-digit years, do not use commas. In scientific writing, four-digit numbers omit commas.

1 BC
2007

See page 1492
1000°C

BUT 10,372 BCE

Normally precede decimal fractions less than one with a zero. The decimal point is indicated in the United States with a period; European and Canadian practice is to use a comma. (Chicago, 9.19-20)

12,345.67 (US and British)
12 345,67 (European and Canadian)
First quarter ratings were 1.7 for January, 1.3 for February, and 0.8 for March.

Probabilities, correlation coefficients, firearms caliber, batting averages and the like omit the leading zero.

$p > .05$
 $R = .10$
Ty Cobb's average was .367.

“But being as this is a .44 Magnum, the most powerful handgun in the world, and would blow your head clean off, you've got to ask yourself one question: 'Do I feel lucky?' Well, do ya punk?”

4.3 Round numbers expressed in hundreds.

Multiples of 100 between 1,100 and 1,900 inclusive should be styled in numerals. Because Pepperdine style preference is to spell only one through nine, a style clash occurs when referencing these numbers in terms of hundreds. Therefore:

In response to the question, he wrote an essay of 1,500 words.

NOT

In response to the question he wrote an essay of fifteen hundred words.

4.4 Calendar terms.

Use numerals for days of the month, omitting rd, th, st, nd, and years:

April 6 1988 400 B.C.

Note: Constructions such as March 2nd or the 11th of November are avoided in written English. They can be used when making an accurate representation of a spoken rendering of these constructions (speeches, sermons, dialogue).

4.5 Percent.

Use numerals for percentages unless a percentage figure falls at the beginning of the sentence. Spell out the word percent in nonscientific copy. Use the % sign for statistical and scientific text. Percent should always be used with an Arabic numeral, even when the number is less than ten. Never hyphenate number + percent, even in adjectival form (see Section 3.25). (Chicago, 9.18)

Thirty percent of the class missed the pop quiz.

Professor Black predicted that 5 percent of the class would drop out before the end of the semester.

By documenting several business losses in his side ventures, John was able to lower his adjusted gross income into the 10 percent tax bracket.

At this pH it is observed that around 70% of the adsorbed protein leaks into solution during 24 h, while a leakage of only 15% is observed at pH = 6.

Assuming a cost of capital of 12% for the original cash flow analysis presented, the IRR of the new product would be 14.35%.

It should be noted that while 55% of subjects in the second sample achieved or exceeded the median score for the aggregate, only one subject within that 55% placed in the top quintile.

The professor announced that 10 percent of the class made A on the test.

4.6 Series of numbers.

Use numerals within a series to maintain consistency if more than half of the numbers are 10 or over; otherwise, spell out numbers within a series.

120 days, 5 hours, 50 minutes

Six hats, three purses, five umbrellas, nine sweaters, and fifteen pairs of shoes were sold yesterday.

4.7 Millions, billions, etc.

Use numerals with the words million, billion, trillion, etc. except in generic indication of unspecified large quantity. For partial figures, decimals are preferable to fractions, and do not carry decimals beyond 2 decimal places.

1 million

5.75 million (pref.) or 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ million

17.9 billion

That Jerry D. is one in a million.

4.8 Ranges of numbers.

Do not leave out nouns such as hundred, thousand, or million in the first figure of a range.

He makes from $20 million to $25 million every year.

NOT: “$20 to $25 million,” unless one means $20.

4.9 Hours of the day

Use numerals to indicate hours of the day.

7 PM or 7:30 PM (never “7:00 PM” unless used in lists of events, tabular material, etc., to preserve alignment of type)

Time of Day treatment (Pepperdine exception)

When indicating times of day, use unpunctuated caps to indicate AM and PM. Use zeros for even hours only when an exact time is emphasized. Do not use numbers to express noon or midnight.

Reception: 5:15 – 6 PM

The first train leaves at 5:22 AM and the last at 11:00 PM.

The seminar began at 9:15 AM and broke for lunch at noon.

Rodriguez was born at midnight, August 21-22.

(contrast Chicago, 9.38)

4.10 Amounts of money. (Pepperdine exception)

Use numerals with the word cents. the cent sign (¢), the dollar sign ($), or other currency symbol (e.g., £, ¥, €).

Whole-number dollar amounts less than $10 may be spelled out if dollars is spelled out, but avoid mixing dollars with dollars indicated by $.

Use numerals and dollar signs for round dollar amounts followed by million, billion, trillion, etc.

When indicating US currency to an international audience use US$ as the currency marker.

3¢/3 cents/$0.03 (avoid three cents)

$3 (or three dollars; avoid $3.00 unless tabulated in columns)

$33 (avoid 33 dollars and thirty-three dollars)

$33.03

$300 (avoid three hundred dollars)

$1,300 (avoid thirteen hundred dollars)

$3,000 (avoid three thousand dollars, NEVER $3 thousand)

$3 million

$383 billion

$383.6 trillion

$3,333,333.33

“Six walnut clusters at 50 cents each, that’ll be $3 please,” she said dryly. (mixing 50¢ or three dollars is OK)

Avoid: Tell you what, I’ll let you have the three pens for $3 each, making it nine dollars altogether before tax.

The actual cost exceeded $3.5 billion.
(three and a half billion dollars is also OK)

He almost fooled me with his $500 Armani suit but the giveaway was the $19.95-for-two-pairs shoes from Payless.

The competition entry fee will be US$30.

That “little” mistake just cost me three gazillion bucks!

4.11 Academic units, GPAs, scores.

Academic units, grade point averages (GPA), or scores from any type of organized competition or testing authority are expressed in numerals. (See also Section 7.37)

John was carrying a load of 16 units this semester.

Jane maintained a grade point average of no less than 3.88 throughout her college career.

Bob figured that by scoring a 5 on all of his advanced placement tests, it would save him approximately $2,000 in tuition.

The Waves scored a 99-to-90 victory over Gonzaga last Friday. (or more conventionally: . . . scored 99-90 over Gonzaga last Friday.)

The Straus Institute took 1st Place among the top 10 such programs.

Pepperdine was tied for Number 47 among the top 50 schools in the nation in the U.S. News & World Report annual rankings.

4.12 Ages.

Ages of persons (and animals) are to be expressed in numerals in obituaries, short biographies, class notes, alumni listings, etc.

At that time Gerard, 58, had three grandchildren ages 5, 3, and 2.

An author or editor may opt to more conservatively spell out ages, but if elected, that styling must be carried out consistently throughout the document and/or the larger publication in which it resides.

4.13 When to bend the rules: consistency and flexibility.

Where many numbers occur within a paragraph or a series of paragraphs, maintain consistency in the immediate context. If according to the rule you must use numerals for one of the numbers in a given category, use them for all in that category. In the same sentence or paragraph, however, items in one category may be given as numerals and items in another spelled out. (Chicago, 9.7)

A mixture of buildings—one of 103 stories, five more than 50, and a dozen of only 3 or 4—has been suggested for the area.

The population grew from an initial 8,000 in 1960 to 21,000 by 1970 and 34,000 by 1980.

Between 1,950 and 2,000 persons attended the concert.

4.14 Phone numbers.

The preferred styling for phone number is to use a period separator.

310.506.7224 1.310.506.7224

The more traditional formats—(310) 506-7224 or 310-506-7224—may be used in alternative when there is possibility of ambiguity using the period separator (e.g., a phone number with periods may be misread as a URL).

International phone numbers:

When styling international phone numbers for an American readership use the following general pattern (periods separate significant elements from each other):

011.49.6221.90250

Deconstructed:

011 = Code to dial out of the US
49 = Country code (in this case, Germany)
6221 = City/region/area code (in this case, Heidelberg)
90250 = phone number (in this case the Heidelberg campus)

When styling international numbers for an international readership use:

+49 6221 90250
(contrast to above example)

Deconstructed: “+” is the stand-in for whatever initial calling code a reader may have to punch/dial.

International styling of Pepperdine University’s main number would be:

+1 310 506 4000
 (“1” is the country code for US/Canada)

5 PERSONAL NAMES, TITLES, AND ATTRIBUTES

5.1 Personal names - first reference.

Always use the full name of a person the first time they appear in an article. Use a middle initial if appropriate. A single initial should never be used. If a person goes by initials only, use both. If a person does not have a middle initial, use full name.

Note: The space between initials should be the same as the space between initial and name.

Susan Anthony
Susan B. Anthony
Susan Brownell Anthony
S. B. Anthony
NOT S.B. Anthony nor S. Anthony

Norvel Young
M. Norvel Young
Matt Norvel Young
M. N. Young NOT M. Young nor M.N. Young

Dr. W. B. West, Jr.
NOT Dr. W. West, Jr. nor Dr. W.B. West, Jr.

5.2 Personal names—successive/subsequent reference.

After referring to an individual by full name, in subsequent references use last name. If the person has a doctoral degree, use Dr. on first reference. If there is no doctoral degree, it is not necessary to use a title such as Mr. or Ms.

Dr. Clive Staples will be lecturing tonight on the history of Christian hymns. Staples is a professor of religion and director of church relations at Pepperdine University.

5.3 Use of the title Dr.

Use the title Dr. when referring to a doctor of medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine, or to persons holding an academic doctorate, including J.D.'s in an academic setting.

Usage note: As of this writing, the School of Law preferentially styles its law professors with the personal title Professor rather than Dr.

5.4 Pepperdine titles.

When referring to senior Pepperdine faculty/staff members, the title or rank given them by the University can be used as a personal title.

Only the following Pepperdine titles and ranks should be used as personal titles in running text. Avoid referencing lower titles and ranks.

University Officers

President

Vice President

Chancellor

Vice Chancellor

Provost

Dean

Professor (see Sections 5.5-5.6 below)

Qualified iterations of the above (e.g. associate dean, executive vice chancellor, assistant chancellor, etc.) should be used sparingly, since to most readers, use of such beyond a first reference usually does not give more clarity. Long personal titles can be unwieldy, add visual clutter, and can seem pretentious. See Section 5.7.

Authors may want to use professional titles when they want to convey a tone of elevated respect and bring a greater focus upon the office rather than the officeholder.

Department of Public Safety Uniformed Personnel

Commander/Commander.

Captain/Capt.

Sergeant/Sgt.

Officer

Examples

Professor Julius Kelp/Professor Kelp (2nd ref.)

Dean Letitia Martin/Dean Martin

Associate Dean Hedda Counter/Counter

Chancellor Finis Valorum/Chancellor Valorum

President Quincy Adams Wagstaff/President Wagstaff

Captain Bernabe Montoya/Capt. Montoya

Officer Francis Muldoon/Officer Muldoon

5.5 Use of the title Professor (Prof.).

Generally, apply the courtesy title professor before individuals with credit-hour teaching responsibility at Pepperdine, or individuals of professorial rank at other colleges or universities. See note in Section 5.6 below for exception.

5.6 Use of the titles Associate/Assistant/Adjunct Professor et al.

Generally, do not qualify the title of professor with associate or assistant before a person's name, but do qualify it after the name.

Professor Cleopatra Skewton
Cleopatra Skewton, associate professor of English

Exception: In contexts where making distinctions of academic hierarchy would be necessary and proper, apply full name of position as courtesy title (e.g. Associate Professor Luz Nguyen, Lecturer Noah Tall). Alternatively switch to courtesy titles of Dr./Mr./Ms. to avoid engaging professional sensitivities.

For distinguished professors:

William Omaha MacElroy, Howard Carter Professor of Egyptology

5.7 Long titles.

Avoid using long titles before the names of people:

Superintendent Eileen Dover
Eileen Dover, superintendent of public instruction

Vice President Carl Ponzi
Carl Ponzi, vice president of finance and administration

5.8 Titles for couples.

In running text, the construction Mr. and Mrs. [male name] is generally to be avoided. On formal correspondence, however, that styling can be used in address blocks and formal salutations, if context is traditional and formal, and the husband and wife share the same surname, or it is unknown whether they share the same surname.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jefferson
Dear Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson: (formal)
Dear Louise and George, (informal)

For correspondence to couples with different surnames:

Ms. Angelina Jolie and Mr. Brad Pitt
(female first, male second)
Dear Ms. Jolie and Mr. Pitt: (formal)
Dear Angelina and Brad, (informal)

For correspondence to different-surname couples where sex is ambiguous or not apparent:

Alphabetize by surname and use full names:

Yi-ming Lao and Peacebird Whittaker

Dear Yi-ming Lao and Peacebird Whittaker: (formal)

Dear Yi-ming and Peacebird, (informal)

Chris Blanco and Pat Schwartz

Dear Chris Blanco and Pat Schwartz: (formal)

Dear Chris and Pat, (informal)

Clumsy, but workable. Follow-up and find out who's what.

Special note: Use alphabetic logic as above in ordering joint parties of a same-sex couple, but use the appropriate courtesy titles:

Mr. Chris Blanco and Mr. Pat Schwartz:

Dear Mr. Blanco and Mr. Schwartz,

An alternative, more individualist address block treatment would be to put each party on separate lines with no conjunctions:

Ms. Chris Blanco

Ms. Pat Schwartz

Dear Ms. Blanco and Ms. Schwartz,

5.9 Academic couples.

When referencing a couple where one or both members of a couple hold academic rank, always give locational precedence to spouse with higher academic rank. If equal, give precedence to female. If equal and same-sex, give precedence alphabetically.

Couples of unequal rank and common surname.

Professor and Mrs. Rufus Musony

(NEVER Mr. and Mrs. Prof. Rufus Musony)

Dr. and Mrs. Rufus Musony

Professor Catalina and Mr. Rufus Musony

Dr. Cataline and Mr. Rufus Musony

Dr. Cataline and Prof. Rufus Musony

Dean Letitia and Dr. Dean Martin

Couples of equal rank and common surname.

Professors Cataline and Rufus Musony

Drs. Cataline and Rufus Musony

Couples of equal rank and disparate surname.

Professors Cataline Cicero and Leslie Saffeau

Drs. Cataline Cicero and Leslie Saffeau

5.10 Use of the title Ms.

Use Ms. before a woman's name unless she is married and chooses to be called Mrs. If a woman is being referenced as part of a couple, refer to Sections 5.8 and 5.9 above. Plural of Ms. is Mss. or Mses.

The title Miss, rare these days, is to be used only when requested by the addressee. Miss can also be safely used when referencing a female adolescent or younger when the context requires editorial respect or distance. (There are also women who use Miss professionally in the fashion, body-care consulting, and other trades where an association with feminine youth, freshness, and innocence is helpful.) When in doubt, use Ms.; it is never incorrect. For subsequent references in a journalistic piece, use last name only.

5.11 Race, religion, and national origin.

Do not identify individuals by race, religion, or national origin unless such identifications are essential to an understanding of the story.

5.12 Honor rolls.

In general, titles are NOT used for ceremonial and honorary listings (e.g. donor lists, sponsors for an event, etc.). When styling a husband and wife by name, female has locational precedence:

Louise and George Jefferson

If the wife uses a different surname, list full names joined by and, female first, alphabetizing by the male's last name. Other single family members (and divorced or separated couples) are listed individually:

Sample Roll of Distinction

Patty Lane-Harrison and Richard Harrison	[couple, two surnames]
Louise and George Jefferson	[couple, traditional]
Cathy Lane	[cousin to Patty]
Natalie and Martin Lane	[parents of Patty]
Abraham Simpson	[father of Homer]
Jessica Simpson	[unrelated Simpson]
Lisa Simpson	[daughter of Homer]
Marjorie and Homer Simpson	[couple, traditional]
Gloria Stivic	[divorced from Michael]
Michael Stivic	[divorced from Gloria]

Note of pragmatism: The above style guidelines as to wife/husband name order are frequently excepted in University practice (in fact, most jointly-named Pepperdine places are the reverse of standard). These are provided as an editorial starting point to provide a logic for common practice. Deviate as necessary for political or donor-relations reasons, but keep a consistent internal logic to avoid potential overanalysis by readers.

Compound-surname considerations.

Many individuals have compound surnames, surnames which are composed of two separate names (both capitalized) which may or may not be connected with a hyphen.

In Latin America, there are standard cultural practices for deriving and forming an individual's compound surname from both a mother's and father's clan names. Consult the Chicago Manual of Style for further guidance on this topic.

In United States practice, there are no rules. Because compound names are relatively rare, persons with them have usually made express wishes known per their treatment; check notes to file, database notes, and assigned University contact persons for verification.

For purposes of inclusion in honor rolls and other alphabetized lists, always alphabetize compound names by the first letter of the first name of the compound.

Sample Honor Roll Listing

Cassiopeia Coffin	[single surname]
Andromeda Coffin-Barker	[hyphenated compound]
Vanna T. Wannamaker	[single surname]
Irma Wanner Coffey	[unhyphenated compound]
David Wheeler-Diehler	[hyphenated compound]
Jazmine Wigglin	[single surname]

Same-sex considerations.

If the listees are a same-sex couple and it is appropriate to list them as a couple, treat them like an opposite-sex couple with different surnames (see above), but alphabetize the couple by last name and then alphabetize within the listing by 2nd last name. Otherwise list individually:

Gabrielle Deveaux and Alice Pieszcecki
Gertrude Stein and Alice B. Toklas
Jodie Dallas and Michael Tolliver
Jack McFarland and Will Truman

6 GRAMMAR

6.1 Subject-object differentiation.

Care should be taken to differentiate between the nominative and objective cases.

Correct: Thank you for inviting my wife and me to dinner.
Incorrect: Thank you for inviting my wife and I to dinner.

If you are unsure which is correct, try the following simple test: Drop the other person from the sentence to see if it still makes sense.

Correct: Thank you for inviting me to dinner.
Incorrect: Thank you for inviting I to dinner.

Clearly the former is correct; hence, the correct compound would be my wife and me.

6.2 Multiple-subject/verb agreement.

When using or between two singular subjects, the verb that follows should be singular.

When Johnny or Susie flunks a test, Dad gets upset.

When using or between two plural subjects, the verb that follows should be plural.

When the Earps or the Clantons ride into town, beware of flying bullets.

If a subject has both singular and plural elements, use a plural verb.

If Jennifer or her friends come by, please let me know.

Note: When a singular subject is qualified by a parenthetical statement which tends to convert the subject into a multiple (it is actually surrounded by parentheses or em dashes), use a singular verb.

Like clockwork, at 10 AM every Sunday, Derrinda Pugh (and her stair-step brood of seven youngsters) was always to be found in the 15th row, second from the back, epistle side, center-aisle seat, in St. Athanasius Episcopal Church.

This last guideline is somewhat gray. If the sentences immediately surrounding the example focus on the family group rather than Derrinda individually, that may be enough context to force the verb plural. (But if that were decidedly the case, the author should use commas instead of parentheses, and change the seat to seats.)

6.3 Mass (or collective) nouns.

Sometimes referred to as collective or noncount nouns, describe things uncountable and usually abstract (peace, cleanliness) or an aggregation of people or things (posse, faculty, senate). Such nouns usually take a singular verb, but when used in the collective sense they may take either a plural or singular verb, depending on whether the author wants to emphasize the individuals or the group.

When the electorate assumes a monopoly on violence, justice is possible.

The rescue fleet arrives tomorrow to deliver much needed supplies and personal services.

By and large the “Alpha” fleet of 24 garbage trucks complete their scheduled rounds by 2 PM each day.

Historically the faculty always votes with the services union in opposing reductions in the number of teaching days.

Historically the faculty break into three factions that work at cross purposes—the tenured liberals who control all the committees, the tenured conservatives who protest regularly via pointed memos, and the coalition of untenured assistants and lowly adjuncts who are just happy to get a paycheck.

6.4 Who vs. whom.

Use who for subject references, and whom for object references.

Correct: The pay should be adequate for whoever is doing the job.

Incorrect: The pay should be adequate for whomever is doing the job.

The pronoun whoever is not the object of the preposition for; the entire following clause is the object, and within that clause the pronoun is the subject.

If you are unsure which is correct, try the following simple test: Think of the pronoun who (or whoever) as being equivalent to he or she, and whom (or whomever) as equivalent to him or her. Then try a substitution to see which one makes sense:

Correct: Who is doing the job . . .

Incorrect: Whom is doing the job . . .

6.5 Not only ... but also.

When using the correlative not only, it usually should be followed with but also.

His behavior brought disgrace not only on himself but also on his family.

6.6 That vs. which

That is used to introduce a restrictive clause—one that refers to a specific type of the noun it modifies. As a result, it provides essential information and cannot be omitted:

The red lawnmower that is in the garage requires a new sparkplug.
(refers only to the red lawnmower in the garage)

The mittens that are on the table belong to Johnny.
(refers only to the mittens on the table)

Which introduces a nonrestrictive or parenthetical clause—one that adds nonessential information that could be omitted without changing the meaning of the sentence. A nonrestrictive clause always requires commas.

Mount McKinley, which is in Alaska, is the highest mountain in the United States.

The red lawnmower, which hasn't worked since 1995, needs a new sparkplug.

Who applies to people, which applies to things, and that may apply to either.

The students in the theatre, who are all members of the Drama Club, are rehearsing for their next play.

The books on the floor, which were left by a student, are in danger of being stolen.

The group that came to dinner consisted of members of the Pepperdine Associates.

7 COMMON MISSTYLINGS AND POTENTIAL LITERARY PITFALLS

7.1 a and an.

Use a before any word beginning with a consonant sound. Use an before any word beginning with a vowel sound. Check the vocalization of words beginning with h carefully as they can be either.

Is there a euphonium part in this band arrangement?

Was it possible to imagine a hell more boring than this, she wondered.

Mark is a HUD attorney by day and a punk guitarist by night.

He is an officer in the Marine Corps.

Lee gave an hourlong talk at the conference.

The email was encoded in an HTML format.

7.2 A lot.

Always two words. Meaning: “a considerable quantity or extent.”

NEVER alot.

This event is always a lot of fun and frequently sells out, so buy your tickets early!

“So, you come here a lot?” he queried as if on a script.

7.3 Alumni and emeriti.

Alumni.

Former students and graduates of a school are known as its alumni. Various forms of the word follow.

Alumni: plural gender-neutral group

Alumnae: plural feminine group

Alumnus: singular gender-neutral individual, but may also be masculine singular when appropriate

Alumna: singular female

Alum: informal, singular male or female

Distinguished Alumnus Award is the proper styling for both male and female recipients being awarded this distinction at Pepperdine commencements.

Emeriti.

Emeritus is an honorary title given after retirement and follows the same rules as alumnus:

Emeritus: singular gender neutral or singular masculine when appropriate

Emerita: singular feminine

Emeriti: plural gender neutral

Emeritae: plural feminine

7.4 Affect vs. effect.

Affect is almost always a verb meaning “to influence or to have an effect on.” Effect can be either a noun (meaning “an outcome, result”) or a verb (meaning “to make happen, produce”). Affect as a noun has specific meaning in psychological terminology; consult a dictionary.

The bad news affected everybody’s paycheck.

The bad news had the effect of putting everybody in a foul mood.

The bad news prompted administrators to effect a change in policy.

7.5 And vs. & (ampersand).

Do not use the ampersand symbol (&) to stand for and in ordinary running text.

The ampersand has three basic uses:

1. it is traditionally used in styling professional partnerships especially in law, finance, accounting, insurance, and advertising;
2. it is an abbreviation in listings and other applications where space is limited; and
3. it is an ornamental element in logos, mastheads, headlines, title pages, etc.

As an abbreviation it is to be avoided to avoid ambiguity. See Section 2.19.

7.6 Anxious.

Avoid using anxious as a synonym for eager. Standard meaning: “worried, distressed.”

Breanna was excited and anxious to be going to Disneyland. (use eager).
Breanna was apprehensive and anxious about getting her wisdom teeth pulled.

7.7 Athlete vs. student-athlete vs. student athlete.

See Hyphens (Sections 3.23-3.27). Refer to members of Pepperdine teams as athletes, students, or student-athletes, depending upon editorial emphasis desired. A student athlete (no hyphen) is someone studying to be an athlete (COMPARE student nurse). A student-athlete is someone who has two roles, student and athlete (COMPARE nurse-practitioner). Scholar-athlete can be used as a synonym for student-athlete.

7.8 Athletic vs. athletics.

Use athletic as an adjective only. Use athletics to denote the discipline, the major, courses of study, the University department, and its personnel (both noun and adjective).

Note: Avoid unintended irony by not using the term athletic supporter for philanthropists and boosters of the athletics program.

John, 275 pounds and seven feet of solid, wedge-shaped brawn, cut an athletic figure even as he casually strolled the quad in loose-fitting khakis.

A physician’s certification of medical fitness must be on file with the athletics department before an athlete may report to practice.

Coach McKenna “Mickey” Goldmill has served a dual role as defense coach and assistant athletics director for more than a decade.

7.9 Bi- vs. semi-.

Bi usually means “two.” Semi usually means “half.” So biweekly means every two weeks, and semiweekly means twice a week. Writers are sometimes unclear about the distinction and therefore readers are even less clear. If using these prefixes, give readers some context to help comprehension and clarity.

The Bugle is a semimonthly publication, hitting newsstands on the first and third Mondays of each month.

The committee meets on a regular bimonthly basis in even-numbered months, taking off December.

Exception: biannual and semiannual both mean “twice a year,” but biennial means “every other year.”

The equinox, a biannual event on the solar calendar, figures heavily in superstition and mythology.

Due to budget constraints the view book is only produced biennially.

7.10 Billion, trillion.

In the US one billion equals 1,000,000,000 and one trillion equals 1,000,000,000,000. Use figures for accuracy when writing for an international audience as billion and trillion can mean differing quantities in other English-literate countries.

7.11 Carat, karat, caret.

Carat is a measure of weight for a gemstone. Karat is a measure of purity for gold. Caret is the typographical “rooftop” (^) symbol used in computer programming, proofreading, and digital messaging shorthand.

7.12 Church(es) of Christ.

Noun references to “Churches of Christ” or to “the Church of Christ fellowship” will normally be treated in the plural sense. “Churches” and “Christ” are both capitalized. Do not precede with “the” in the plural sense. Names of individual churches are treated regularly as proper nouns.

Adjectival references will normally be treated in the singular sense.

Examples of preferred usage:

Churches of Christ represent a faith tradition deeply rooted in primitive Christian worship practice. [noun-subject]

The association recognized Churches of Christ, the Presbyterian Church USA, and the Assemblies of God as partner institutions. [noun-direct object]

John Doe is a Church of Christ elder. [adjective]

John Doe is an elder at the Silverlake Church of Christ. [individual church]

John Doe is a member of Churches of Christ. [typical biographical statement]

Pepperdine University maintains a vital relationship with Churches of Christ. [typical informal PU affiliation statement]

7.13 Complement vs. compliment.

A complement is something that completes or brings to perfection. A compliment is a remark intended to flatter or praise.

Louise's patent leather clutch and matching pumps provided the perfect complement to her evening gown.

After making an absolutely stunning entrance at the after-party, Louise received compliment after compliment on her ensemble.

Note: the adjective complimentary generally means “free of charge”; avoid the redundant construction “free complimentary.”

Associates should contact the dean's office to reserve complimentary tickets to the event.

7.14 Comprise vs. compose.

The traditional distinction between these two words is that the parts compose the whole; the whole comprises the parts. However, many writers and editors now use comprise as a synonym of compose (but usually in the passive voice); but be aware that to do so may invite ambiguity at worst, as well as criticism from traditionalists.

Five schools compose what we know today as Pepperdine University.

Pepperdine University is composed of Seaver College, the School of Law, the Graziadio School of Business and Management, the Graduate School of Education and Psychology, and the School of Public Policy.

Pepperdine University comprises its flagship liberal arts undergraduate school, Seaver College, and four graduate schools.

Progressive usage: Pepperdine University is comprised of five schools.

7.15 Data.

This was originally the plural of datum, meaning something used as basis for measurement, calculation, reasoning, or inference. Data should be commonly treated as a mass noun and linked to a singular verb. In scholarly and scientific text, however, data should be used as a plural.

The panel's data indicates that immediate changes in policy are warranted.

The data indicate that 50 percent of the sample experienced mortality with a 250 mg. dose.

7.16 Defamation vs. libel vs. slander.

Defamation is speech or communication that declares false information that damages a person's reputation. If defamation is recorded (print, tape, video, etc.) it is libel; otherwise, it is slander.

Use unhyphenated form, following standard rules of capitalization. Works as noun, verb, or adjective. Short form for electronic mail. Only use hyphenated (e-mail) when needed to avoid ambiguity.

7.18 Email addresses.

Email addresses should be rendered in lowercase always. Sparing exception may be made for promotional or marketing purposes. Treat website addresses likewise.

Dividing email addresses: See Web addresses, Section 7.45.

7.19 Ensure vs. insure vs. assure.

While these three words can be synonyms for each other, at least by dictionary definition, they each carry some “baggage” that comes along when used. Use ensure as the general term meaning “to make sure that something will (or won't) happen.” Use insure to refer to underwriting financial or asset-related risk. Use assure to mean securing safety, instilling confidence, to inform positively.

To Mimi, Tom's word itself was enough to ensure the project would succeed.

After he left, however, she called her agent for a rider on the general policy to insure replacement value of the shipment.

Even then, Mimi pulled Tom's completion record for review, just to assure herself that she had made the right decision.

For his part, Tom arranged for an armed military escort to ensure an intact delivery after crossing hostile territory.

The squad captain gave Tom his assurances that his crew was definitely battle-hardened and ready for all contingencies.

7.20 Et al.

Abbreviation of et alii (“and others”)—the others being people, not things (see etc.). Because al. is an abbreviation, it requires a period.

7.21 Etc.

Abbreviation of et cetera (“and other things”)—don’t use it to reference people (see et. al.). Use this when implying a list too extensive to fully cite, not when you merely run out of ideas or details. Do not precede etc. with and (et means and).

7.22 Head coach.

See Hyphens (Sections 3.23-3.27). A position in the athletics department. Also a verb, (hyphenated) meaning to perform the duties of a head coach.

Jim Ratz , the veteran head coach of the Pepperdine crew team...

Ratz has been head-coaching for the past 25 years.

Pepperdine enjoys tremendous depth in its head-coaching staff...

7.23 Hyphens vs. en dashes vs. em dashes.

(See Hyphens, Sections 3.23-3.27 for more information. Also Chicago, 6.80-96)

Typing them:

The hyphen (-) is the short horizontal line symbol that is typed by pressing the unshifted key directly to the right of the zero (0) key on most keyboards.

An en dash (–) is two consecutively typed hyphens.

An em dash (—) is four consecutively typed hyphens.

In Microsoft Word, you can insert en and em dashes via the insert-symbol procedure, or you can use the autotext feature to create them. Consult the Word help screens for the correct keystroke sequence.

Definitions:

The hyphen is used for word division, indicating compound words, separating chunks of letters or numbers from each other, and to indicate vocalized spelling.

syl-lab-i-ca-tion devil-may-care attitude anti-American sentiment cross-country
1-800-767-2586 ext. 2
011-235813-22
Ol’ MacDonald had a farm, e-i-e-i-o!

The en dash is used to connect numerals and less often, words functioning as a symbolic stand-in for the words from...to, through, or up to and including. When indicating a range with an en dash, never use the word from (logically redundant). Do not use it to indicate an exclusive range (that is, standing in for between). En dashes may be enclosed by spaces at left and right.

Jody's Seaver College years, 1980 – 1983, were some of happiest in her life.

Refer to chapters 3 – 5 for more information.

5:30 – 6:30 PM Chancellor's Reception, TAC 3rd Floor

Please note that L.A. – New York flights leave the airport hourly.

The score was final at 36–22, the Waves prevailing.

But

Jody attended Seaver College from 1980 through 1983.

NEVER Jody attended Seaver College from 1980 – 1983.

The investigation concluded that the event occurred sometime between August 1 and August 5.

The em dash is used (sometimes two) to set off parenthetical elements that amplify or explain an idea in a sentence, or an em dash can be used creatively to signal emphatic breaks, pauses, and interruptions (more so than commas or other punctuation may imply). When a writer employs an em dash, the meta-message is “Pay attention, this is important!” So use them judiciously.

The ultimate goal of endowment growth—so often forgotten by advancement executives overly focused on the short term—is academic freedom and intellectual honesty.

The golden fleece—it seemed so close, and yet the enormity of the final task was daunting and discouraging.

When young friar Martin rose to offer his defense—the silence in the chamber was palpable and tense—he first made direct eye contact with each of the panel members.

7.24 i.e. vs. e.g.

Abbreviations for id est (“that is”) and exempli gratia (“for example”) respectively. Use i.e. to further identify or explain the person/concept/thing just referenced.

Use e.g. to introduce an example or a short list of examples explaining the person/concept thing just referenced. Resist the temptation to add etc. at the end of the list, as e.g. infers a short list at the very most.

The English phrases are preferable in formal prose, but these abbreviations are as acceptable as they are nimble and facile. These usually initiate parenthetical statements that are bracketed by parentheses, commas, or em dashes depending on editorial emphasis.

Requestors must submit the proper paperwork, i.e., the “Green Req.,” to get anything done.

To expedite the application process, bring two forms of picture identification, e.g., driver’s license, school ID card, certain credit cards, employee access badges, when reporting to your counseling session.
(italics for emphasis)

7.25 Infer vs. imply.

Use infer when indicating something is hinted at or suggested. Use imply when indicating that reasoned deductions can be drawn.

Because Tom has on the same suit that he had on yesterday, I think I can safely infer that he never made it home last night and that he spent it you-know-where.

The taxi company records, the airline passenger manifest, and two eyewitness reports at the destination airport imply that Tom was not in town after 9:35 PM last night.

7.26 Internet.

See Web, Section 7.44-7.45.

7.27 Lady.

Best to avoid using this word except in the specific case “Ladies and gentlemen,...” Many find its use sexist and condescending, e.g., the cleaning lady, bag lady, the ice-cream lady, lady attorney, lady judge, lady mechanic, the lady Waves. It is possible to use lady to denote a woman of cultured taste and refinement, but writers who do so must tread carefully and carry the contextual baggage without misstep.

7.28 Lay, lie.

When using these words to denote the act of putting something, someone, or one’s self at rest, generally in an understood horizontal position, most writers have no problem using lay (transitive, taking a direct object) or lie (intransitive, taking no direct object).

I lay down the book on the nightstand and try to sleep.

Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray the Lord my soul to keep.

I lie awake nights worrying about my insomnia.

The controversy (to many) comes when lay is used like lie intransitively. An ambiguity can arise because the past tense of lie (lay) is the same as the present tense of lay (lay).

I lay awake nights worrying about my insomnia. [past or present?]

I laid awake nights worrying about my insomnia.

Their backpacks, dropped upon arriving home, laid around the entry hall as hazards to navigation.

Chicago recommends forbidding intransitive use of lay. However, the intransitive use of lay is so common (according to Merriam-Webster, the intransitive use of lay has been present in English since the 1300s) that it makes no sense to forbid it, so writers need to be careful when using lay and lie, and to avoid the potential ambiguity that exists and cast surrounding sentences so that intended meanings are clear.

7.29 Login/log in, logon/log on/log onto.

Expressed as one word or two, one word preferred.

7.30 Nicknames.

Rule 1: Obvious nicknames. When referencing someone who typically goes by a nickname that is obviously derived from the formal name, use the full formal name as first reference and last name as successive reference. In pieces of an informal or casual nature, the nickname may be used as successive reference.

Formal: Jonathan Quick/Quick

Casual: Jonathan Quick/Jonny

Jonathan Quick is founder and president of Quick Education Design, Inc. (QED). Quick previously worked for Elder Instructional Associates in Norwalk as senior creative director. (formal)

Jonathan Quick is founder and president of Quick Education Design, Inc. (QED). When not on the job, Jonny can be found playing trombone in his community band, giving tennis lessons to inner-city youth, or tending his prize-winning azalea garden. (casual/conversational)

Rule 2: Less-than-obvious nicknames. When referencing someone who typically goes by a nickname that is not obviously derived from the formal name, use the full formal name, following up the first name with the nickname in quotes or with a parenthetical explanation, as first reference and last name as successive reference. In pieces of an informal or casual nature, the nickname may be used as successive reference.

Formal: Harriet “Suki” Hampton/Hampton

Casual: Harriet “Suki” Hampton/Suki

Harriet (or Suki, as she is widely known) Hampton graduated from . . .

Caveat: The above two rules assume both the formal name and the nickname are known. If not the case, do not extrapolate a formal name from an apparent nickname. Some people have “nicknames” (Mike, Bill, Betty, etc.) as their given name. If referencing a man named Buzz Lambert, and nobody knows him otherwise, assume Buzz to be the given name (no quotes around it).

Rule 3: Middle names as first names. Persons who go by their middle name. Default practice should be to make first reference: first initial, middle name, last name. Successive reference should be last name (formal) or middle name (casual).

Formal: M. Norvel Young/Young

Casual: M. Norvel Young/Norvel

Usage caveat: Occasionally, individuals who go by a middle name go to great pains to obscure their first name for personal reasons. Do not “out” them without express permission. The University may be privy to such an “obscured” first name in a file because we have participated in a legal transaction with them or upon their behalf. Err on the side of privacy.

Rule 4: Plaques, certificates, honor rolls, and recognition lists. Ask the individual how to style the name and comply with their wishes (insofar as it does not conflict with Pepperdine’s boundaries of propriety).

If an honoree is not available for advice, default to the appropriate rule above. If an author finds he/she must make a choice sans advice, consider that since these types of media are all about public recognition, a good rule of thumb is to be sure names are styled such that the honorees’ family and acquaintances will know it’s her/him when they see the name.

7.31 On-campus, off-campus.

See Hyphens, Sections 3.23-3.27. Hyphenate adjectival forms.

The Viticulture Club members decided it best to meet off the Malibu campus for its inaugural “Flights of Fancy” event.

The September pajama parade is a gentle, on-campus hazing ritual not without its charms.

7.32 Online.

One word, unhyphenated, adjective or adverb.

He went online to conduct his initial research.

an online database online shopping

7.33 Peak, peek, pique.

Frequently switched around due to inattentiveness. Compare the noun forms: A peak is a top or high point; a peek is a quick glance, usually done against prohibition; a fit of pique is an episode of wounded vanity.

The verb forms are frequently confused to unintended ironic effect. To pique is to annoy or arouse. To peak is to reach climax.

CONTRAST:

Rick's interest is piqued. (He's interested.)

Rick's interest has peaked. (He's no longer interested.)

7.34 Prepositions: sentences ending with.

For many, it is a well-established custom to not (ever!) end a sentence with a preposition in written English. (It is nearly impossible, however, to carry on a conversation without violating this custom, so ingrained is this speech pattern.) The University takes no position on this, and leaves the tolerance level up to individual authors, editors, or departments.

It is noted that most such constructions can be recast without a loss of clarity, bowing of course to the famous exception of Winston Churchill: "That is something up with which I will not put."

7.35 Program vs. department. (Pepperdine exception)

The various courses of study listed under each academic division at Seaver College, the Graduate School of Education and Psychology, the School of Law, the School of Public Policy, and the Graziadio School of Business and Management are called programs, rather than departments.

The Natural Science Division includes the biology program and the chemistry program, among others.

When ending a letter with a postscript, always punctuate when cast in lowercase; uppercase can stand unpunctuated.

Usage note: Since the advent of word processors in the 1970s, almost everybody now regards postscripts not as additional thoughts that needed to be added to a finished, unalterable inked piece of correspondence, but strategically placed data points or calls to action designed to deliver a finishing stroke, especially in letters meant to persuade a reader. Do not be disingenuous in your tone and content understanding the fact that p.s.'s are now a rhetorical contrivance (unless actually handwritten in ink by the author).

7.37 Rankings. Top 10, 1st Place, Number 2, etc.

Capitalization of rankings can vary according to context, rhetorical emphasis, and editorial tone. Here are some guidelines that may be helpful. Because named awards, prizes, and honors are capitalized (Nobel Prize, Emmys, Stanley Cup), rankings, especially when used as if they were a named prize, ought to be capitalized.

1. Use numerals to indicate awarded rankings since that is how they are usually presented and understood.
2. Capitalize ranks when a specific place or rank is attributed (especially 1st- 2nd-, and 3rd-Place wins).
3. Capitalize a tier of exclusive, highest honor when treated as if a named cohort (Top 10, Top 40, Top 50, Top 100).
4. Lowercase generic references of rank and place, especially if they are not within a cohort of exclusive honor.

The Straus Institute for Dispute Resolution continues to rank first among programs of comparable scope and caliber.

The Straus Institute for Dispute Resolution earned 1st Place among programs of comparable scope and caliber.

The basketball team attained a Number 7 national ranking of the Top 10 NCAA Division I schools. (Give preference to the long form in running text; use the abbreviated forms No. 7 and #7 in tables and contexts which are informal or which have limited space).

Of the 10 highest-achieving NCAA Division I schools, the basketball team ranked seventh in the nation.

The college consistently places 45th in the annual Princeton Review overall rankings of international colleges and universities.

7.38 RSVP, R.S.V.P., and R.s.v.p.

Traditionalist usage: Since this is an abbreviation of the imperative sentence in French, “Répondez s’il vous plaît.” (meaning “please respond”) it should be treated as such. Any of the three forms styled above can stand as a complete sentence. If you add verbiage to the sentence, it comes afterward and is punctuated accordingly. And remember that the courtesy term please is already built into the abbreviation.

[Basic invitation format]

[X] REQUESTS YOUR PRESENCE ON [DATE] AT [TIME] AT [PLACE].
R.S.V.P.

[X] REQUESTS YOUR PRESENCE ON ON [DATE₁] AT [TIME] AT [PLACE].
R.S.V.P. BY [DATE₂].

[literal meaning: Please respond by DATE₂.]

RSVP BY PHONE, FAX, OR VIA THE CARD PROVIDED, TO THE PRESIDENT’S OFFICE NO LATER THAN [DATE₂].

“New School” usage (Horrors! say the traditionalists): According to Merriam-Webster 11th ed., RSVP (all caps, no periods) is now an English verb meaning “to respond to an invitation” and can be conjugated as such (RSVP’ed/RSVPed, RSVP’ing/RSVPing).

[X] REQUESTS YOUR PRESENCE ON [DATE] AT [TIME] AT [PLACE].
PLEASE RSVP.

[X] REQUESTS YOUR PRESENCE ON [DATE] AT [TIME] AT [PLACE].
PLEASE R.S.V.P. BY [DATE₂].

Some alternative RSVP statements:

BECAUSE SPACE IS LIMITED WE ASK THAT YOU RSVP BY PHONE, FAX, OR VIA THE CARD PROVIDED, TO THE PRESIDENT’S OFFICE
NO LATER THAN [DATE₂].

IF YOU HAVE NOT YET RSVP’D, PLEASE DO SO BY [DATE₂] TO ENSURE A PLACE.

Usage note: Because there is a significant portion of the population who regard the new-school approach as incorrect and unsophisticated, writers should default to traditional unless there is a reason to do otherwise.

Drafters of invitations can also avoid the traditional vs. new-school dilemma by issuing the request in English. Some examples:

Please respond.
Please respond by DATE₂.
Reply by DATE₂.
The courtesy of a reply is requested.
Regrets only.

Frequently confused with another. A sight is something worth seeing, an aiming device, among other things [the sights of L.A., a gun sight]. A site is a place [a work site, a website]. Occasionally confused with cite, short for citation, meaning “a reference to published work.”

7.40 Space(s) after colons and ending punctuation.

Insert only one space between sentences within a paragraph; or space only once after periods at the ends of sentences. Insert only one space after colons.

If you are preparing copy to be typeset, especially do not put more than one space after ending punctuation because the art directors will have to strip those extra spaces out anyway.

Exception is made in correspondence and letters, especially in these cases:

1. the typeface used is Courier or some other measured font simulating a typewriter, or
2. the intended audience is predominantly people born before 1970.

Usage note: The custom of spacing twice after commas and ending punctuation is a typewriter-ism. Persons who learned to type on typewriters are accustomed to this practice, and single spaces tend not to look correct (when they can detect it). Due to their uniformity of size and line, measured fonts were more difficult to read and the double space gave readers a visual cue to help differentiate sentences. Current proportional fonts provide greater ease of reading and the luxury of a second space between sentences can be dispensed with.

7.41 Theatre vs. theater (amphitheatre).

Preferred spelling is theatre. This is reflected in Pepperdine place names (Smothers and Lindhurst Theatres) and in the names of the academic major, the course of study, and individual courses at Seaver College. The derivative word amphitheatre is likewise treated. Observe the alternate spelling when used in self-styled proper names, such as the Apollo Theater or the American Conservatory Theater.

Auditions are open to theatre and non-theatre majors alike.

Discounted rush tickets to theatre events are available two hours before curtain.

The President's Briefings are usually held in Smothers Theatre.

7.42 Values-centered.

Avoid using this vague, undefined term alone if you are making a reference to Pepperdine's Christian orientation. If an author or editor is making a point about the Christian ethics and principles underlying the Pepperdine mission, a clear, unequivocal approach is best recommended.

See the Graziadio School mission statement, quoted in part, for a best use of this term:

The mission of the George L. Graziadio School of Business and Management is to develop values-centered leaders and advance responsible business practice through education that is entrepreneurial in spirit, ethical in focus, and global in orientation. As a professional school growing out of the tradition of a Christian University, we seek to positively impact both society at large, and the organizations and communities in which our students and graduates are members.

Used within the first sentence to introduce the idea of a belief in moral standards and ethical practice, the next sentence then follows up with an unambiguous stance that it is Christian values which anchor the school.

7.43 Verbal vs. oral.

Many writers misguidedly use verbal intending to specify spoken communication (You need to state that verbally.). However, verbal can mean something that is put into words both written and spoken. If you wish to specify spoken utterance only, use oral.

7.44 web, web page, website, World Wide Web, (the) Internet.

Treat web (in reference to the World Wide Web), web page, website, webmaster, and other web-prefixed words as non-proper nouns. Capitalize specific references to the World Wide Web. The Internet, another name for the World Wide Web, is also capitalized.

Private webs: Many companies, clubs, households, etc., have private, internal webs which are accessible only to members of a specific LAN/WAN, also known as intranets. These may or may not have their own proper internal names which may need to be capitalized based upon the context. When referencing these (and the WWW) in general, the lowercase w is correct. (Chicago 7.76).

7.45 Web addresses.

Generally style entirely lowercase. Sparing exceptions can be made for promotional or marketing purposes. Include prefixes http:// or www. only when it adds clarity. Always include prefix https:// for secure web addresses.

seaver.pepperdine.edu
pepperdine.edu

Dividing URLs and email addresses: When breaking a URL or web address across two lines, make the break if possible between elements:

- after a colon (:), a slash (/), or double slash (//); or
- before or after an equals sign (=) or ampersand (&); or
- before a period (.) or other punctuation.

Never hyphenate a URL or an email address across a line break. If URL or email address contains a hyphen, to avoid confusion, do NOT break at the hyphen. Break at elements as noted above, or at normal word-division points without using a hyphen.

8 PEPPERDINE OFFICIAL STATEMENTS, HISTORICAL LANGUAGE, AND UNIVERSITY LITERARY PROTOCOLS

8.1 Equal Employment Opportunity Statement

Pepperdine University is an Equal Opportunity Employer and does not unlawfully discriminate in employment practices on the basis of race, color, national or ethnic origin, age, sex, disability, or prior military service. Federal guidelines recognize the right of church-related institutions to seek personnel who will support the goals of the institution, including the right to select members of the church to which the institution is related.

(Source: Center for Human Resources 12/2012)

8.2 Equal Opportunity Statement – Variation for Advertisements for Positions

Ads—especially if they are brief—should include only the phrase "Equal Opportunity Employer." If ads are full-length, they should contain the full paragraph above.

Brief advertisements shall include the phrase:

"Equal Opportunity Employer" or "EOE."

8.3 Statement of Church Affiliation—complete version

Pepperdine University is religiously affiliated with the Churches of Christ, of which Mr. Pepperdine, University founder, was a lifelong member. Faculty, administrators, and members of the Board of Regents represent many religious backgrounds, and students of all races and faiths are welcomed. It is the purpose of Pepperdine University to pursue the very highest academic standards within a context that celebrates and extends the spiritual and ethical ideals of the Christian faith.

8.4 Statement of Church Affiliation—abbreviated version

Pepperdine University is religiously affiliated with the Churches of Christ.

8.5 Accreditation Statement

Institutions granted the status of Accreditation must use the following statement if they wish to describe the status publicly:

Pepperdine University is accredited by the Accrediting Commission for Senior Colleges and Universities of the Western Association of Schools and Colleges, 985 Atlantic Avenue, #100, Alameda, CA 94501, (510) 748-9001.

WASC policy quoted in part:

The phrase “fully accredited” is to be avoided, since no partial accreditation is possible. The accredited status of a program should not be misrepresented. The accreditation granted by WASC refers to the quality of the institution as a whole. Since institutional accreditation does not imply specific accreditation of any particular program in the institution, statements like “this program is accredited” or “this degree is accredited” are incorrect and misleading.

Please note that it is a federal regulation [602.23(d) of the Reauthorization Act] that institutions when disclosing their accreditation status also disclose the name, address, and telephone number of the accrediting agency. In addition, Commission policy on “Disclosure of Accrediting Documents and Commission Actions” includes in “III. Public Statements by Institutions.”

If an institution chooses to disclose its accredited status, the Commission, by federal regulation, requires institutions to identify WASC by name, including WASC’s address and telephone number.

(WASC 2001 Handbook of Accreditation, p. 104)

Please continue to provide the following contact information wherever WASC is mentioned in your catalog or other publications:

8.6 The Mission of Pepperdine University.

Pepperdine is a Christian University committed to the highest standards of academic excellence and Christian values, where students are strengthened for lives of purpose, service, and leadership.

8.7 Statement of Affirmation.

Pepperdine University Affirms

That God is

That God is revealed uniquely in Christ

That the educational process may not, with impunity, be divorced from the divine process

That the student, as a person of infinite dignity, is the heart of the educational enterprise

That the quality of student life is a valid concern of the University

That truth, having nothing to fear from investigation, should be pursued relentlessly in every discipline

That spiritual commitment, tolerating no excuse for mediocrity, demands the highest standards of academic excellence

That freedom, whether spiritual, intellectual, or economic, is indivisible

That knowledge calls, ultimately, for a life of service.

8.8 Required listing of Pepperdine officers.

All University catalogs and annual reports are to include a list of the University's Board of Regents, the University Board, and a list of the names of all Pepperdine administrators at the level of school dean or higher. Life members of the Board of Regents should always be indicated as such.

When listing the names of Pepperdine administrators in print, the following protocols should be observed:

Name should include:

First name (not nickname) and middle initial (if they have one) or

First initial and middle name (if listee goes by middle name)

Last name

Abbreviation for highest level (terminal) of degree achieved

Abbreviation for secondary degree if JD, MBA, or disparate doctorate

Order of Name Listing: (conventional listing)

For non-academic publications, list the president and relevant vice president.

8.9 George Pepperdine's Dedicatory Address of September 21, 1937.

This text is printed and delivered each year at the Founder's Day ceremony.

What we say here today in the dedication of these buildings is of very little importance, but the work which will be done through the days and years and generations to come will be of very great importance if that work is guided by the hand of God.

What I mean by the statement, "Guided by the hand of God," is that God's spirit working through his holy word, the Bible, shall influence and control the lives of each and every member of the faculty to such an extent that he will spread Christian influence among the students.

America and the world need Christianity. Yes, they need knowledge, culture, education, but they need Christ even more. The heart of man usually grows to be perverse unless trained by the influence of God's word. If we educate a man's mind and improve his intellect with all the scientific knowledge men have discovered and do not educate the heart by bringing it under the influence of God's word, the man is dangerous. An educated man without religion is like a ship without a rudder or a powerful automobile without a steering gear. There is no life so much worthwhile in this world as the Christian life because it promotes the most happiness and contentment and the greatest promise of life hereafter.

Therefore, as my contribution to the well-being and happiness of this generation and those to follow, I am endowing this institution to help young men and women to prepare themselves for a life of usefulness in this competitive world and help them build a foundation of Christian character and faith which will survive the storms of life. Young men and young women in this institution will be given educational privileges equal to the best in the liberal arts, business administration, Bible training, and later, we hope, in preparing for various professions. All instruction is to be under conservative, fundamental Christian supervision with stress upon the importance of strict Christian living.

To the faculty members, each and every one of you, I am giving this solemn charge before this great company of our fellow citizens and before God-that you shall conduct your lives in such a manner as to be noble examples of Christian living in the presence of the students who are likely to be influenced more by what you do than by what you say.

Let us this day dedicate these buildings and this institution, the George Pepperdine College, to the cause of higher learning under the influence of fundamental Christian leadership. And at the same time let us, the members of the faculty and the board of trustees, dedicate ourselves anew to the great cause of beautiful Christian living. In this way we shall do our small bit to glorify the name of God in the earth and extend His kingdom among the children of men.

This version of the Founder's Address was approved and printed in 2005 Founder's Day program. Preserve punctuation and capitalization as above in future printings. One editorial change from the archival copy was made in paragraph 6; "higher learning" was substituted for "high learning."

8.12 Oft-quoted sayings of M. Norvel Young.

The past is prologue.

There is no competition between lighthouses.

The future is as bright as the promises of God.

It's a great day to be alive. (frequent addendum: "in Malibu")

8.15 Alumni designations and attributions.

Standard designation: When an alumnus is first referenced in a University publication, a designation of his/her advanced degree (unpunctuated, if any) and class (last two digits of the year preceded by an apostrophe) shall be made as appropriate. Multiple designations are separated by a comma and a space. A year-only designation is understood to designate a baccalaureate degree.

This designation may be enclosed within parentheses, brackets, braces, et al., or may be in a typeface differing from the proper name as deemed appropriate. The designation typeface treatment should be consistent within itself.

John Katch '60	John Katch ('60)
Jonathan Kemp '94, MBA '07	Jonathan Kemp ('94, MBA '07)
Cathy Kort MA '96	Cathy Kort (MA '96)
Nicole Hall MBA '05	Nicole Hall [MBA '05]

When this standard designation is used, no legend or table of abbreviations is required.

Longer designations (rarely used): Usages that additionally require school and/or academic-major information should follow the following forms and abbreviations:

Wilbur Wave (BA '65, GPC) [one-degree alumnus]
Dolores Blanquette (BS '99, MDiv '02, SC) [multi-degree, one-school alumnus]
Wes Ottoman (BA '99, SC; JD '04, SOL) [multi-degree, multi-school alumnus]
Naranja Bledblue (BA '99, Communications, SC) [long form for sidebar articles]

These longer designations MUST be accompanied by a legend or table of school abbreviations that clarify meaning to persons unaffiliated with the University.

Designating non-degreed alumni: Two groups of non-degreed attendees of Pepperdine will be written about fairly often: 1) former competitive athletes, and 2) females who attended from 1937 to about the 1970s. The best practice is to include dates of attendance in the running-text narrative and leave the person undesignated. If this is not possible or practical (e.g., a list of Pepperdine attendees most of whom have alumni designations), follow with a parenthetical with years of attendance indicated.

Jane Roe (attended 1940-41)

Use these standard abbreviations for long-form designations:

10 GUIDELINES FOR LETTERS, MEMORANDA, AND REPORTS.

The University as a whole has no specific requirements on formatting business letters, memoranda, and or reports. Please see your direct supervisor for direction on formatting issues that may be required in your department.

Resources abound both in print (reference books) and on the web that advise on the elements of good business writing form. The Merriam Webster's Secretarial Handbook and the Gregg Reference Manual remain perennial favorites.

10.1 Basic components of the business letter.

Typestyle/fonts: There are no prescribed typestyles or fonts that must be used in University word processing, but if a writer or editor wishes to match the appearance of text used in Pepperdine's flagship publications, they can download the Google fonts "Source Sans Pro" for sans serif uses, and "Lora" for a serif face. These are open source fonts that are freely available at no cost.

University publications exclusively use sans serif typefaces for body copy, but as stated, there is no typestyle requirement in day-to-day business correspondence. Avoid point sizes smaller than 12 to maintain readability for readership of all ages.

Persons seeking specific font/typestyle guidance for projects should consult Integrated Marketing Communications creative director Keith Lungwitz for consultation.

Margins: The generic Pepperdine University letterhead has no fixed margins implied in its design, so you may elect margins that you deem appropriate.

The Pepperdine wordmark occupies the top one-inch of an 8.5"x11" sheet, so, the date line will need to sit at one inch below the wordmark. Some departmental letterhead has a left-flush design at 1", therefore a 1" margin is necessary in those cases.

A one-inch margin on all four sides is standard for most report uses.

Date: Insert date of correspondence; use unabbreviated Month/Day/Year format

The second type of address block [ATTN version] is employed when the recipient is only be communicated to as a functionary of the organization, and not specifically engaged as an individual with whom the correspondent has a relationship. Using the ATTN address signals that the correspondence is to be regarded at a further professional distance than the first example.

Body copy: content of the letter

10.2 Memoranda (AKA email)

Business memos, generally meaning internal communications among personnel in the same company/organization, have been replaced with email.

As such, best use of email is to keep them short, to the point, to document that work has been done, and, if needed, to clearly move the burden of decision or action in advancing a project to next person so that they know what to do and in what time frame.

Email/memos go to people you work with all the time, so they don't need courtesies like "Dear X," or "Sincerely yours,"—they expect to get right to work with you, so just start with their name and put the action call right up front.

If you are starting an email thread, think carefully how you style the caption and how it will serve you as you imagine it sitting in your addressee's email inbox as they scan for your name and your project from a potentially long list several screenloads long.

If you find yourself needing to actually write a paper memo, this is the classic format, usually put on a company 2nd sheet [you can see how the email is the evolution of this form rather than the business letter]:

*Letterhead, masthead, title page, and headline references can serve as first reference, but if so employed, great care must be taken to avoid unclear reference.

†A school’s first reference can omit Pepperdine or Pepperdine University or of Pepperdine University if there is sufficient context to identify the parent University.

Example: an article on the School of Law nested within the alumni magazine Pepperdine Voice. However authors and editors should use the full-form first reference if there is any likelihood that a document may be excerpted or reprinted as a standalone piece.

‡Pepperdine’s or Pepperdine University’s as a part of first reference is to be avoided EXCEPT in pieces where the tone is intentionally informal, colloquial, conversational, and/or self-consciously hip.

§Pepperdine can be used as successive reference for a school as long as it can be done without ambiguous reference to the University or a sister school.

GSBM should NEVER be used as a 1st or 2nd reference in any document other than internal administrative communications.

††Acronyms signifying the University and its schools (PU, SC, SOL, GSBM, SPP, SPS, etc.) are to be avoided in any text which is not solely intended for “internal” audiences. Exceptions are GSEP and GPC, but the acronymic 2nd reference should be parenthetically noted at first reference. Generally, acronyms are confusing and meaningless to anyone but “insiders” such as faculty, staff, students, and alumni.

‡‡Historical note: Alumni and personnel of the Los Angeles campus from the 1950s and onward, refer to their school as Pepperdine College. Alumni and personnel previous to that time tend to refer to their school as George Pepperdine College.

Carter (always use title and surname) the officer / the sergeant

*Though technically correct, avoid these constructions; low- to mid-level titles tend to be less than informative in their essential form.

When a professor’s terminal degree is a juris doctor, current University guidelines permit (but do not oblige) the styling Dr. for academic purposes (see Section 5.3). In current practice, some individuals, editors, and administrators avoid the Dr. styling for JD-holding professors. Writers should check for appropriate sensitivities.

Appendix 3 Commencement Bulletin Writing Guidelines

Following are guidelines for standardized formats and styling conventions for commencement bulletins at Pepperdine University. These guidelines are provided primarily by example. If you have any questions please contact Editorial Services.

I. Listing of Platform Participant Names:

Names are in all caps, roman face. Titles, functions, and organizations are on a separate line(s), headline caps, italics face. If participant possesses a middle name, default to employing middle initial unless otherwise instructed by the participant. Do not restate participant titles in subsequent program reference.

Use ordinal numbers for dates with this hyphenation and capitalization:

First through Ninth
Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth Thirteenth through Nineteenth Twentieth
Twenty-First through Twenty-Ninth
Thirtieth, Thirty-First

Time: Two in the Afternoon

Seven Thirty in the Evening (we had evening commencements on the old L.A. campus)

These will never happen, but if they ever do, this is the structure:

Twelve Noon
Twelve Thirty in the Afternoon (“afternoon” begins at 12:01 PM)
Four Seven in the Afternoon (not spelled “Zero” or “Oh”)
Five in the Evening (“evening” starts at 5 PM)
Six Forty-Seven in the Evening (hyphenate compound-number minutes)

How to Write About Academic Degrees: Tips for University Writers

The following was guidance given at the request of marketing writers at one of the schools.

When writing generically about degrees, treat them in lowercase.

John Smith received a bachelor's degree.

*bachelor of arts.

*bachelor of science in management.

master's degree.

*master of business administration.

*master of science.

doctoral degree.

*doctorate.

*Do not put the word “degree” after these terms when used as singular nouns. They are degrees in and of themselves; just as one would not say “I have a Honda Accord car.” or “My daughter attends Santa Monica High School school.” Such usage is not wrong, but it’s redundant and not best practice.

When writing generically about degrees using abbreviations, use caps and no periods.

John Smith received a

BSM/BA/BS/PhD/PsyD/JD/DBA/JSD.

*Mary Lee received an

MA/MBA/MS/LLM/MPP/MDR/MDiv/EdD/AB /LLB.

. . . etc.

*“An” used because those degree abbreviations are vocalized using an initial vowel sound.

Treatment of generic plurals:

They offer five bachelor's degrees.

master's degrees.

doctorates.

doctoral degrees.

BSs/MSs/PhDs. [apostrophe OK but not preferred; e.g. BS's MS's PhD's]

Adjectival use – Generic degree terms can be used as adjectives:

In general, bachelor's degree programs require completion of at least 120 units.

Their master of science in taxation adjunct faculty includes noted industry leaders.

Bachelor of science degrees require more units than bachelor of arts degrees.

PhD program prerequisites require completion of a master's degree or master's degree-equivalent work.

Avoid informal constructions (unless you have a purpose).

In conversation it is OK drop the word “degree” and say:

*“He got his bachelor’s from Cal State Long Beach.”
“I earned my master’s from Claremont.”*

Use this construction only if you are adopting a highly conversational or informal tone.

Writing About Degrees and Degree Programs

Degree vs. degree program: Pepperdine degrees and programs are most commonly referred to as proper nouns in marketing copy. A “degree program” is the specifically designed academic “package” in which a degree may be offered. For instance, the MBA is offered by the Graziadio School in four different programs, each designed for and targeted to different demographics and constituencies, but all receive the same degree:

- 1) the Part-Time MBA program
- 2) the Full-Time MBA program
- 3) the Executive MBA (EMBA) program
- 4) the Presidents and Key Executives (PKE) MBA program

Keep the degree-program distinction clear in your mind, otherwise your writing about either will NOT be clear, and your readers will be confused. Best marketing practice is to keep full-name references to degree programs proper (capitalized) to signal the program for which you are promoting recruitment. Use first and second references per the table below. After the abbreviated form is introduced in parentheses alongside the first reference, it can be used repeatedly by itself thereafter in the document.

Example:

The Master of Science in Global Business (MSGB) prepares students to enter the world of international business with a deep understanding of the global economy and its markets. The MSGB is designed to provide students. . . . Our MS in Global Business will . . .

First reference forms can be reiterated at any time, but do not repeat the abbreviation designation. A rule of thumb for sales copy: restate the full name at least once on every subsequent page. Always make sure all first full-name references match up in the academic catalog, program brochures, primary web page, viewbook, and other collateral materials.

Some Pepperdine Degrees and Degree Programs: Table of References

First proper-name reference	Second references
Bachelor of Arts in Communication BA in Communication	BA, bachelor of arts, bachelor's degree, degree
Juris Doctor JD	JD, law degree, degree
Master of Science in Applied Finance (MSAF) MS in Applied Finance (MSAF)	MSAF, MS, master of science, master's degree, degree
Master of Arts in Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL) MA in Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL)	TESOL, MA, master of arts, master's degree, degree
Master of Public Policy (MPP)	MPP, master of public policy, master's degree, master's degree program, public policy degree, degree
Executive MBA (EMBA)	EMBA, MBA, EMBA program, MBA program, degree
Doctor of Psychology in Clinical Psychology (PsyD) PsyD in Clinical Psychology (PsyD)	PsyD, PsyD program, doctor of psychology, doctorate, doctoral program, degree
Nutritional Science Certificate program Nutritional Science Certificate	certificate program, certificate
Master of Fine Arts in Cinematic Media Production (MFA)	MFA, master of fine arts, master's degree, degree
Master of Dispute Resolution (MDR)	MDR, master of dispute resolution, master's degree, master's degree program, degree
Bachelor of Science in Management (BSM)	BSM, bachelor's degree, bachelor's degree completion program, degree
Juris Doctor/Master of Public Policy (JD/MPP) joint degree	JD/MPP, joint degree program, joint program, program, degrees

This table is by no means exhaustive in listing all degrees/degree programs or in the number of ways that one can creatively refer to an educational program in second reference. This should give you an idea of the approach. Use common sense and always aim for clarity.

Adjectival Usage of Degrees and Programs

Proper-name first- and second-reference forms can be used as adjectives. Do not cap the nouns that the adjectival forms qualify:

Our MS in Entrepreneurship program offers . . .

The Master of Science in Organization Development curriculum is rigorous and practical

The MSAF faculty comprises experienced working professionals . . .

Generic Reference of GSBM Degrees and Programs (for writing experts only)

Referring to our own degrees and programs in a generic way is relatively rare, usually occurring in objective report writing, not persuasive copy. Make all references in lowercase. Such generic references are usually signaled by the use of the article “a” rather than “the” preceding.

Example:

The Graziadio School offers four full-time residency degree programs—a full-time MBA, an international MBA, a master of science in global business, and a master of science in applied finance.

The preceding example could just as easily be cast in proper-noun reference, but it would have a proprietary tone rather than a dispassionate one. Choose your reference style to reinforce your purpose for the piece.

Caveat: The difference in treatment of generic vs. proper-noun form can be subtle. If you are unsure, clarify your premises. Generic reference will likely occur in prose that is drawing comparisons with one degree program to another and/or with one institution to another.

Appendix 5

A PEPPERDINE GLOSSARY

Writers for the University will find that certain terms occur with some regularity which require constant lookup, that some have peculiar institutional history, and that some of them have unique treatment apart from Merriam Webster's Collegiate Dictionary. We have collected and continue to collect these for reference.

... [three ellipsis dots, no spaces between] This symbol differs from the dots used in academic writing intended to indicate an omission in a quotation [. . .], three periods with spaces between. Used mostly in persuasive copy, it suggests a thoughtful pause, or an invitation for a reader to fill in their own [obvious] conclusion, or to simulate an announcer saying “Wait for it” to then deliver a punchline.

al-Qaeda Cap at beginning of a line. Do not italicize. There are various transliterations, we stick with this one.

Al-Qaeda is a terrorist organization.

Osama bin Laden was one of al-Qaeda's original founders.

Ahmanson Music Building (incorrect and obsolete) Proper name. This was never the real name of the Music Building. The Ahmanson Foundation gave money toward the smaller fine arts complex as it existed before the construction the Cultural Arts Center (CAC) and the museum. Ahmanson declined invitation to donate further funds to name the expanded complex and the Ahmanson name was assigned to the atrium within Smothers Theatre by agreement. The Music Building continued to be called the “Ahmanson Music Building” (AMB) by custom and was even styled that way on campus maps for years until the practice was corrected in the 2010s. Until the building finds a namesake, style it the Music Building.

Aliento, The Center for Latina/o Communities at GSEP. “The” is always capitalized.

[artist] in residence Regular noun, not proper. Never hyphenated unless required for clarity. Same treatment for other nouns: executive, director, scholar, city manager, etc.

Associated Women for Pepperdine Fundraising auxiliary of the University founded by Helen M. Young. Treat as collective noun, takes singular verb. Abbreviation AWP (does not take “the.”) best seller Regular noun, two words.

best-selling Adjective, always hyphenated.

birth date Regular noun, two words.

Board of Regents The governing board of the University. Not to be confused with “University Board” which is an advisory board.

board of visitors Advisory board made up of mostly alumni (“visitors”) engaged in advising policymakers at the various Pepperdine schools and colleges. Proper noun when paired with school (e.g., Seaver College Board of Visitors, GSEP Board of Visitors).

cafe An eatery. Do not use the accent mark on the “e” unless attempting to look stylishly French; this is an English word found in English dictionaries.

child care Regular noun, two words.

CGA Abbreviation of charitable gift annuity, a planned giving technique.

City Manager in Residence program Outreach program of SPP. Capitalize as name of program, but do not capitalize the named participant. Kurt Wilson of Stockton, California, was the 2016 city manager in residence.

[city name] as adjective Adjectival usage. Structure frequently used in alumni notes. When using a city name as adjective, try to reference the state earlier so that you do not have to clumsily include the state name (with comma) in a city-name first ref.
Example: Sally is an attorney in their Denver office. vs. Sally is an attorney in their Denver, Colorado, office. In that case, better to cast as: Sally is an attorney based in their office in Denver, Colorado.

co- prefix words The words co-chair, co-chairperson, co-founder, co-teacher, and co-president are designated as unhyphenated words in Merriam Webster Collegiate Dictionary but may be hyphenated as long as consistency is maintained throughout the document.

conflict resolution Unhyphenated in regular noun and adjectival forms. Unique jargon to Straus Institute referring to a specific approach to their discipline; more or less synonymous with ADR (alternative dispute resolution). When treated as a historical movement in rhetoric, render in caps as proper noun Conflict Resolution.

Convocation Proper noun. Chapel program at the undergraduate school. Abbreviated to “Convo.”

counterterrorism Regular noun, no space, no hyphen.

course work Regular noun, two words. Student work done throughout a course. There is a strong compulsion for writers to collapse this into one word right now.

CRAT Abbreviation of charitable remainder annuity trust, a planned giving technique.

cross country Always unhyphenated; a Pepperdine exception. Men’s and women’s sport. Most dictionaries hyphenate noun and adjectival forms (cross-country more typically).

CRUT Abbreviation of charitable remainder unitrust, a planned giving technique.

Dance in Flight Proper noun. Special program of the Fine Arts Division at Seaver.

daylong Adjective, no hyphen.

deMayo, Robert GSEP administrator with unique typographical treatment; appears frequently in print. Avoid placing “deMayo” at start of a sentence or line, but capitalize “DeMayo” when it occurs.

Dolores Proper name. Name of cherub fountain statue on the South Los Angeles campus, later relocated to the Malibu campus. Image is that of a naked little girl holding a blanket. There have been many versions of this statue as it was commonly the object of theft pranks; it is a beloved mascot for George Pepperdine College and Los Angeles Campus alumni.

donor-advised fund (DAF) A planned giving technique.

entrepreneurship vs entrepreneurialism “Entrepreneurship” is the practice of being an entrepreneur, one who organizes, manages, and assumes the risks of a business or enterprise. In recent writing, the qualities of nurturing innovation, proactivity, autonomy, and being finely attuned to perceive customer needs are also attributed to entrepreneurship.

To be “entrepreneurial” then, is for someone who may NOT be an entrepreneur (like a corporate officer or manager or line worker in a company—people who are more typically constrained by committees, supervisors, past successful behaviors, and articulated policies) to act at work as if they were an entrepreneur, and “entrepreneurialism” is the practice or belief in allowing employees or corporate agents to act as entrepreneurs, as if they owned the enterprise themselves.

Ethernet Proper noun. A proprietary IT term.

first grader, second grader, 10th grader, etc. Person in grade school. Unhyphenated.

(the) Founders Capitalize as proper when referencing the US founding fathers (and “mothers”). Frequently used in SPP materials.

George L. Graziadio, Jr. Namesake of the business school, standard full-name styling.

hand in hand Adjective or adverb. Unhyphenated.

healthcare Regular noun. One word, no space. Contrast “child care” above (watch out). Used to be two words until Graziadio started hosting their annual healthcare symposium, which then regularized the single-word styling.

hors d'oeuvres Regular noun, plural, not italicized. Snacks served at an event. Frequently used in event collateral.

hourlong Adjective, no hyphen. Similarly daylong, monthlong, yearlong, lifelong. Frequently used in conference and symposium marketing.

Huntsinger Academic Complex Proper noun. Proper name of the building that houses Payson Library (PAY), Pendleton Learning Center (PLC), and Huntsinger Academic Center. Rarely used other than as a grouping term on campus maps. At one time in Malibu campus history the three components were more parallel and equal. The bottom floor was PLC, the middle floor was the library, and the top floor was called “Huntsinger Academic Center” (signage is still extant on the west end of the top floor) and functioned as the primary administrative area before Thornton Administrative Center was built. Payson has since taken over most of the third floor.

L.A. LIVE Entertainment venue in Downtown Los Angeles. Always punctuated, always in caps.

land use Regular noun, unhyphenated all forms.

LA Kings or Los Angeles Kings Professional hockey team. Never punctuated in short form.

lifelong Adjective, one word.

long-standing Adjective meaning enduring. Always hyphenated.

longtime Adjective meaning enduring. Never hyphenated, one word.

Lindhurst Theatre Small black-box theatre on the Malibu campus. Name is misspelled on the exterior wall with –er instead of –re, so watch out for those who point to the wall as canon.

Lisa Smith Wengler Center for the Arts Name of the program of arts and entertainment presented to the public through the University, and collectively to the venues on the Malibu campus in which presentations and events of the program are staged. Venues include Smothers Theatre, Lindhurst Theatre, Raitt Recital Hall, Juarez Palm Courtyard, and the Weisman Museum of Art.

Los Angeles One of the University’s home cities. Writers need not indicate the state of California in first reference.

Malibu One of the University’s home cities. Writers need not indicate the state of California in first reference.

Malibu campus vs. Malibu Campus vs. Seaver College Proper and regular nouns. Before Seaver College was named for Frank Roger Seaver, the undergraduate program in Malibu was called “the Malibu Campus” [“Campus” capitalized] and the undergraduate program in Los Angeles was called “the Los Angeles Campus” [which was eventually discontinued] to differentiate the two programs. When the Malibu Campus became Seaver College, the old name fell into history. Though the distinction today may be less than subtle to some, current practice is to use “Malibu campus” to refer generally to the University’s location in Malibu.

Writers may sometimes refer to the Seaver Campus, the Seaver Main Campus or simply the main campus to refer to the lower part of the Malibu campus including all administrative, academic, athletic, and residential areas; usually the School of Law and faculty-staff residences are not included in that styling. The upper portion of the Malibu campus is the Drescher Graduate Campus.

McMillen, Michael C. Artist whose work is in the Pepperdine permanent collection. Do not confuse him with Michael McMillan who is also an artist of similar age. McMillen’s name will appear from time to time as his work is rotated into exhibition.

member-at-large Regular noun, always hyphenated. Representative on a board without a specific constituency. Do not confuse with treatment of unhyphenated [title] in residence terms.

Michelle Obama Former first lady of the United States; spells her name with two “l’s”.

Millennials Proper noun. Age cohort of persons born roughly between 1980 to 2000. Much has been written about them collectively; some of it is actually accurate. They are the major client target for higher ed currently, so they’re important. The previous cohort tends to be called “Generation X or X’ers.” The cohort previous to that are “Baby Boomers or Boomers.”

multimedia Regular noun. Meaning including various communication technologies.

New York City Major American city. When styled unambiguously this way, writers need not include the state of New York at first reference.

Nootbaar Institute on Law, Religion, and Ethics Proper name. Research institute at the School of Law. Name styling is notable because it is the ONLY institute that takes the preposition “on” in its name. All other institutes take “for”:

- Straus Institute for Dispute Resolution
- Glazer Institute for Jewish Studies
- Davenport Institute for Public Engagement and Civic Leadership
- Peate Institute for Entrepreneurship
- Parris Institute for Professional Formation
- Institute for Entertainment, Media, and Culture

Pepperdine Associates Fundraising program of the University with entry level of a $1,000 annual gift. Treat as collective noun preceded by “the” that takes a singular verb. The Pepperdine Associates provides ongoing scholarship support. Second reference “the Associates” [capitalized] may take a plural verb if the writer is emphasizing the many members versus the organization, so pay close attention to your meaning.

Pepperdine Law Proper noun. An alternative styling of the Pepperdine University School of Law which follows the custom/trend of law schools to “nickname” themselves: Berkeley Law, Duke Law, Texas Law, NYU Law, Penn Law, Michigan Law, UVA Law, UCLA Law, Emory Law, Washington University Law, BU Law, etc. Usage: Always use full name as first reference; use this styling as subsequent reference. Avoid adjectival usage which carries inherent ambiguities (consider resulting constructions like Pepperdine law students vs. Pepperdine Law students vs. Pepperdine Law law students [most clear but awkwardly redundant], et al.).

56 Princes Gate vs. 56 Prince’s Gate The “legal” street address of the London campus has no apostrophe, but traditionally and ceremonially, an apostrophe (i.e., “Prince’s Gate”) is used, and it is so styled and painted over the front door and columns of the campus façade, and on the website because this is how the address is supposed to look. According to London staff, councils ban the use of punctuation on official street signage to avoid confusion, esp. by emergency services. Both stylings are correct per particular contexts.

The “Prince” implied in the address is the Prince of Wales (Edward VII specifically). The first “Prince’s Gate” houses actually faced Hyde Park and they were opposite a new entrance to the park called the Prince of Wales Gate. So they named the houses after that. The Pepperdine house is on Exhibition Road, so round the corner from the originals. It still causes confusion today!

The Prince of Wales is the title given to the heir to the throne, so in this case referred to the eldest son of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert. He was called Albert too, but when he became king he went by his middle name and so was King Edward VII. This is where the term “Edwardian” comes from which describes the houses etc. built during his reign.

It’s often incorrectly assumed the “Prince’s” part of the name was from Prince Albert, as a lot of the streets around us are named after him or Victoria.

private sector Regular noun, unhyphenated all forms.

PTSD or post-traumatic stress disorder Regular noun, hyphenated as indicated. A psychological reaction ... (see dictionary). Term appears frequently in GSEP writing. PTSD needs no antecedent if space is tight.

public sector Regular noun, unhyphenated all forms.

Raitt Recital Hall Proper noun. Venue on the Malibu campus.

real estate Noun or adjective, never hyphenated.

real property Noun or adjective, never hyphenated.

role-play Regular noun, always hyphenated.

scholar in residence Regular noun, never hyphenated. Same as artist in residence.

scholar-practitioner Noun or adjective, always hyphenated. Standard term used in GSEP materials.

smartphone Regular noun. Mobile phone with advanced digital technology able to access the Internet.

Smothers Theatre Proper noun. Venue on the Malibu campus. Namesake is Frances Smothers, NOT the Smothers Brothers.

socioeconomic Adjective, unhyphenated. Term frequently used in social sciences.

Songfest Proper noun. Annual song and dance festival put on by students. In past years there was also an summer festival of art song held on the Malibu campus called “SongFest” (capital F) and the spellings were frequently confused.

stand-alone Noun or adjective, always hyphenated. Meaning independent or self-contained.

start-up Noun or adjective, always hyphenated. A new company or enterprise.

South Los Angeles or South-Central Los Angeles Proper noun. Neighborhood of Los Angeles south of Downtown in which the original Pepperdine campus was located. South Los Angeles is the current preferred styling promoted by the city. “South-Central” was historically used but is avoided now because of pejorative connotations.

United States and US (abbreviation, unpunctuated) Proper name. Spell out name in first reference always. Abbreviation “US” can be used as subsequent reference or as an adjective.
US Marine Corps / US senator Kamala Harris / US Supreme Court

(the) University Board Proper noun. Advisory board of the University comprising some alumni, but mostly prominent citizens who have high interest in Pepperdine. Formed by late Chancellor Emeritus Charles Runnels.

van Rensburg, Deryck J. Proper noun. Dean of the Graziadio School (took office in 2016). Lowercase “van” when it occurs with first name (following Chicago style for Dutch surnames).
Deryck J. van Rensburg / Van Rensburg / Dean Van Rensburg / Dr. Van Rensburg

Washington, DC Proper name. Capital city of the United States. Style DC without periods. Use comma after DC in noun usage. Do not use comma after DC in adjectival usage. DC may stand alone as the name of the city [colloquial use] only if it is clear in context.

the Washington, DC Campus

the Washington, DC Internship program

Pepperdine’s domestic campuses outside of Southern California are located in Washington, DC, and San Jose, California.

Public Policy and International Relations Seminars Offered in DC

Washington State Proper name. Use to reference the state when context does not clearly differentiate it from the US capital.

(the) Weisman Museum Proper name. Museum on the Malibu campus. Full-name reference is Frederick R. Weisman Museum of Art. Short forms: Weisman Museum of Art, the Weisman Museum, and the Weisman.

Wi-Fi Proper noun. Short for “Wireless Fidelity.” Proprietary term for wireless networking technology.
