

Finding the Digital Object Identifier (DOI):

Not all documents are assigned DOIs; usually only digitized, peer reviewed journal articles have them, and even these articles are not always assigned DOIs. Usually the DOI is found on the first page of the journal article near the copyright notice. Here are some other places to check for the DOI:

- On the database landing page (see p. 190 in Publication Manual of APA, 6th ed.)
- Behind a button such as “Article,” “Cross Ref,” or “PsychINFO”

If you don't find a DOI in the above places, you can use a free DOI locator such as:

- <http://www.crossref.org/guestquery/#textsearch>
- www.CrossRef.org.

You can also look at <http://www.apastyle.org/manual/related/electronic-sources.pdf> for more detailed information on DOIs.

If you cannot find a DOI for an article, simply use the URL to the journal's homepage.
