

Balancing Grace and Accountability During COVID-19

Wednesday, September 9, 2020

10-11 AM

Robert Scholz, M.A., LMFT, LPCC

Navigating the challenges of teaching and managing others in the COVID era is a balancing act like we've never had to navigate before. Distraught employees and students can create a negative environment in our workspaces, which can take the joy away from the work that once brought us so much fulfillment.

A thriving workspace and classroom begins with a leader able to balance offering grace where appropriate, while maintaining healthy boundaries and creating a workspace where expectations remain in place. This webinar will offer participants the opportunity to consider where and how to offer grace in their workspaces and strategies to keep employees and students motivated in their daily tasks. To this end, participants will be challenged to consider intentional actions they will take to promote both grace and accountability in their positions at Pepperdine. A Q & A session will be offered after the presentation.

The presenter for this webinar is Robert Scholz, M.A., LMFT, LPCC. Robert has served in many clinical and leadership roles over his twenty-five years working with individuals, families, and organizations. Robert is highly regarded for his work in the crisis management field, and provides consultation and training to many universities, schools, churches, and mental health agencies. Robert worked for over a decade within the Pepperdine Counseling Center, and has been a frequent contributor to the Pepperdine community as a consultant and trainer for the past several years.

Register

24255 Pacific Coast Highway, Malibu, CA 90263 | Phone: 310.506.4000
Copyright © 2020 Pepperdine University | Privacy Policy

Balancing Grace and Accountability During COVID-19

Monday, September 14, 2020
10-11 AM

Robert Scholz, M.A., LMFT, LPCC

Navigating the challenges of teaching and managing others in the COVID era is a balancing act like we've never had to navigate before. Distraught employees and students can create a negative environment in our workspaces, which can take the joy away from the work that once brought us so much fulfillment.

A thriving workspace and classroom begins with a leader able to balance offering grace where appropriate, while maintaining healthy boundaries and creating a workspace where expectations remain in place. This webinar will offer participants the opportunity to consider where and how to offer grace in their workspaces and strategies to keep employees and students motivated in their daily tasks. To this end, participants will be challenged to consider intentional actions they will take to promote both grace and accountability in their positions at Pepperdine. A Q & A session will be offered after the presentation.

The presenter for this webinar is Robert Scholz, M.A., LMFT, LPCC. Robert has served in many clinical and leadership roles over his twenty-five years working with individuals, families, and organizations. Robert is highly regarded for his work in the crisis management field, and provides consultation and training to many universities, schools, churches, and mental health agencies. Robert worked for over a decade within the Pepperdine Counseling Center, and has been a frequent contributor to the Pepperdine community as a consultant and trainer for the past several years.

Register

24255 Pacific Coast Highway, Malibu, CA 90263 | Phone: 310.506.4000
Copyright © 2020 Pepperdine University | Privacy Policy