

Leading Through Fearful and Challenging Times

Wednesday, April 15, 2020
10 - 10:45 AM

Presented by Tom McCluskey
Instructor of Organization Theory and Management,
Pepperdine Graziadio Business School

In the midst of the global pandemic, personal leadership is needed during this time of disruption and fear. People experience varying needs based on their personal situation and we have the opportunity to strengthen the Pepperdine community by supporting our colleagues during this time of need.

Tom McCluskey will share thoughts on leadership in turbulent times learned while working in New York on September 11, 2001, and will answer questions following a 30 minute discussion. Join us as we consider our perspective on the pandemic, recognize challenges caused by remote work and social distancing, and commit to practical actions that will help us lead one another through challenging times.

Register

